MORPHINE MADMAN.

Thrilling Experience of Dr. Wilcox With a Morphine Eater,

Who Attacks the Physician With a Surgeon's Knife—Conquered by Chloroform.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 13.—Dr W. O Wilcox the demonstrator of anatomy in the California Medical college, had a narrow escape from death yesterday at the hands of a maddened morphine eater Dr Wilcox returned from the college of the faculty about 12 o'clock In the patient's sitting room stood a young man of about twenty years of age with that sallowness of complexion which indicated the excessive use of some deadly drug His eyes glared fiercely and he trembled with suppressed excitement

"He told me he desired to see me urgently," said Dr. Wilcox, in speaking of the affair. "I detected that he was a morphine fiend and as I did not care to treat such patients, I told him he would have to go elsewhere. I entered the consulting room, and despite my protest he followed me I threatened to remove him, whereupon he burst into tears and begged I would give him only one 'shot' of the drug. I hesitated, when his manner became threatening. In the next moment I was in the presence of a madman. The morphine fiend now commanded that the request be complied with. On the operating table lay a keen-edged surgeon's knife, with a six inch blade. The madman's attention was directed toward it and in another moment he had possessed himself of it"

"Give me morphine or I'll cut your heart out," he hissed

Dr. Wilcox did not lose his presence of mind nor evince any fear, and laughed at the fellow's threat

"I thought of calling for help," said he, "but I felt that I would precipitate matters. The fellow showed by his conduct that he thought only of wreaking vengence on me and, in fact, he had forgotten all about the morphine I stood near my drug case and the first object upon which my eye rested was a six ounce bottle of chloroform. I quickly grabbed it and had hardly done so when the fiend made a lunge at me with the knife. I removed the cork and, as he followed me, I dashed some of the liquid into his face. It stopped him for a moment and in the interval I soaked my handkerchief with the fluid. He sprang at me again and the next instant I grabbed his right arm with my left hand and with the other held the saturated cloth over his mouth and nostrils. He struggled furiously, but as he was physically weak, I succeeded in holding him long enough to give the chloroform a chance to do its work. He sank to the floor completely anesthetized I then gave him a shot of morphine, and when he regained consciousness he disclaimed all knowledge of his attack upon me and left the office. I never saw him before, and hope never to see him again"

Dr. Wilcox escaped without a scratch but his coat was badly cut

CHIEF JUSTICE FIELD

Will Not Retire From the Supreme Bench.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cala., April 13.—Local democrats do not look upon the retirement of Chief Justice Stephen G. Field as likely to take place soon. The pressure that is being brought to bear to induce him to retire, they say, may be true, but when it would be as a punishment for doing what he considered his duty, they think he will hardly yield. Some time ago Field made known his intention of retirement. He changed his mind, but that circumstance gave credit to the rumor that he was about to yield to the demands of his enemies and carry out his first decision. "Judge Field will not retire," was what Governor Budd had to say about the matter.

"Who would probably succeed him if he should withdraw from his position?"

"Well, I don't think he will withdraw, but if he should, there is only one logical successor. That is Wm. T. Wallace I consider him the foremost jurist of this country today. There is not another man who could so nobly fill the place as he."

Congressman James C. McGuire was quite certain that Mr. Field had absolutely no intention of retiring. He, too, however, favors Judge Wallace as Field's successor in case of the latter's retirement and other democratic politicians and lawyers take the same view.

DENVER, April 13.—Reports all show that Colorado cattle are doing finely and have gone through the winter in better shape than for four years. SUNDAY BASE BALL.

Indianapolis Will Wrestle With the Problem Tomorrow.

The Ball Club Determined to Play and the Officials Just as Emphatic in Preventing Games.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 13.—Interesting times are expected at the ball park tomorrow when the game between the Indianapolis and Cleveland clubs is to be played, or at least attempted. The police department and the sheriff have declared that no Sunday games shall be played in this (Marion) county, while the club management have determined to the contrary. The grounds for Sunday games are just outside the city limits, but the corporate jurisdiction of the city takes them in.

MAKING FORTUNES.

The Oil Men Reaping a Harvest of Dollars

From the Advance of $1.05 in Oil Sold Here at Pittsburg Today for $1.95 a Barrel.

OIL CITY Pa., April 13.—The advance of 25 cents in Lima and Indiana oil yesterday was followed this morning by a notice from the Seep purchasing agency that it would pay $1 75 a barrel for Pennsylvania credit balances This is an advance of 25 cents a barrel from Thursday prices and had prompt effect on the speculative oil market

The long period of stagnation preceding the present advance of nearly $1 05 per barrel for the commodity had driven the majority of the brokers and speculators into other business and to other portions of the country, but the half hundred of the old guard that have stood the speculative battles and storms of the speculative adversity from 1870 until now are reaping a wonderful harvest of good round dollars in profits and brokerage, as this is the only oil exchange left of the many once established at New York, Pittsburg, Bradford, Petrolia, Parker, Warren and Titusville

From all over the country orders are coming from would be speculators attracted by the unprecedented steady and great increase in prices The limited number of certificates, about 750 in all, prevents dealing in extensive lots but the width of the fluctuations more than make up any discrepancy in the excitement and uncertainly of the business and the game is heavy enough to suit the most hardened speculator, gambler or spendthrift.

On Monday of this week the market closed at $1 30 and at 11 15 today was selling at $1 95, an advance of 65 cents in six days, and advance of more than 10 cents a day for the week, and one day of it was a holiday. Although there was some realizing of profits on Thursday and today, the majority of the buying today was for speculative investment It opened excited and strong with sales $1 90, or 2¢ cents higher than on the eve of Good Friday. In less than ten minutes after the opening sales had been made at $1 95 and at $1.92½, there was a fair volume of trading and no signs of a break in the bull movement At 11.30 prices advanced to $1.96½, and at 11·50 a m. 15 000 barrels were sold at $2 The close was steady with sales $1 99 cash and bid

STATE HOUSE ON FIRE.

Illinois' Magnificent $3,000,000 Building Badly Damaged.

Fire Breaks Out at the Noon Hour, When None But the Clerks Are in the Structure.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 13.—Illinois' magnificent five million dollar state house caught fire in the senate wing shortly after noon today and in a few moments it looked as if that portion would be gutted. The fire is supposed to have originated in one of the committee rooms, but from what cause, it is not known An alarm was at once turned in and two steam and one chemical engine responded. Fire Marshal Fountain soon discovered he would be unable to control the fire with that force, and so turned in a general alarm, calling for all of the engines in the city. The fire spread rapidly and soon the whole of the immense building was filled with smoke, so that it was with great difficulty that the firemen could find their way through the labyrinth of hallways and rooms of the upper part of the capitol The wing of the capital where the fire was raging was where the auditors office, the state treasurer and the office of the insurance commissioner and agricultural board are located.

At once when the fire brok out, wild confusion prevailed among the clerks of the various departments and soon the halls were filled with excited girls and women The chiefs of departments remained cool, however, and in a few minutes all of the valuable papers and records were locked up in the fire proof vaults Assistant Treasurer Whitemore at once ordered his clerks to lock up all the money and books of his office and then with them beat a hasty retreat.

In Auditor Gore's office matters did not run so smoothly In that department many women are employed and they became badly frightened, increasing the confusion. With much difficulty the books, papers and records were bundled into the vault

Meantime the fire continued to spread There was not enough fire plugs near the state house to keep the engines working, so the firemen had to labor at a great disadvantage. The firemen reported shortly that all the committee rooms in the senate wing and senate chamber were ruined and that the loss would probably reach from $500 000 to $750,000, and unless the fire was soon checked, would probably reach $1,000,000.

While the state house has been regarded as practically fire proof, the floors of all committee rooms and partitions are of wood and, being extremely dry, burned like tinder.

The roof was made of slate and the beams supporting it of steel, but it was said that if the fire was not soon checked the intense heat might so warp them that the roof with the great dome, 365 feet in height, would collapse. In such an event the loss would reach from $1,500 000 to $2 000 000

The fire was probably started from a tinner's stove, a large force of tinners having been sent up on the roof this morning to make repairs It is said they left their stoves when they went to dinner. A gale of wind was blowing during the fire and the firemen seemed to be unable to cope with the flames. The senate chamber was speedily gutted and all the expensive frescoing is ruined

At 1.45 p. m the firemen at last got the flames under control It is estimated that the damage to the senate wing of the state house will amount to from $75,000 to $100 000 Most of the damage will result from smoke and water.

CROWDING MEN OUT

"Subscriber" Thinks Girls Should Not Displace Do Men.

FORT WAYNE, April 12 1895

Editor SENTINEL

I notice in Thursday's issue you make mention of the importation of 400 Irish girls to take places in New York as domestic servants while American girls crowd the stores to starve on small salaries. The girls are not only retaining good honest, competent men in stores but men are constantly being thrown out of employment in offices on account of cheap female labor, and if it continues to increase in the next century as in the past the time is not far off when men will be compelled to retire I sincerely hope the time will come when there will be a law passed compelling parents when able, to support their daughters, and thereby decrease the number of men who are at present hobbing the country in search of work.

A SUBSCRIBER

The farewell service in the old sanctuary room of the Grace church will be held tomorrow and Rev. Zartman will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

Good Luck Comes to J. H. Hunter, a Convict.

Who Was Sent from Fort Wayne to the Northern Indiana Penitentiary at Michigan City.

A man who was sentenced under the name of C. B. Harrison, but whose real name is J. H. Hunter, is a convict in the northern prison. He was sent up from Fort Wayne and his time will expire in June. Recently his mother died at her home in Newark, N. J. She was a recluse and a miserly woman and at her death left an estate valued at $20,000. Just now Hunter, who is a nervous, wiry, active little man, is on the anxious seat He is trying to get the estate and has reason to believe that there are those who are trying to cheat him out of it. Since the old lady died persons claiming to be her relatives are bobbing up all over Jersey, and Hunter is trying to head off the claimants. He has employed Friend A. Bond, of New York city, as his attorneys, and they are looking after his case The prisoner has been furnishing proof of his heirship. Recently he sent a list of answers to a long list of questions, establishing his identity, and it is probable that he will succeed. Hunter left his mother in New Jersey after the war and saw her but once since That was in 1876. He did not correspond with her often, but shortly before her death he received a letter from her in which she promised him money after his discharge in June Hunter's father was killed in the war and Hunter is the only heir to his mother's state

Heavy Weights.

Although the manufacturers of the Rambler have always led in light wheels, which actually could be ridden, weighing as little as 14½ pounds, on which world's records were made galore, yet at the same time they have not neglected the heavy weights Men weighing 200 pounds and over find Ramblers just to their liking, light, yet strong; furnished with a wooden rim and tire easily repaired, yet capable of standing a pressure of 160 pounds. Perhaps the heaviest rider in America is the Rev. Williams, of San Jose, Cal, who weighs 340 pounds, and rides a Rambler weighing less than 30 pounds. Better get a Rambler catalogue of Katt, the Rambler agent, corner Berry and Harrison streets.

A REMARKABLE CURE

A CASE OF PILES OF EIGHTEEN YEARS' STANDING.

Cured by the Pyramid Pile Cure.

I have seen plenty of pile cures which were recommended as cure a mild case of piles, but there is only one which can be depended upon with certainty to cure even long standing cases, and that is the Pyramid Pile Cure.

Its merits and testimonials are received daily from men and women whose veracity and reliability are above question, and in this connection a letter received from the Rev. Jas. H. Wesbrook of Bowne, Mich., may be of interest to pile sufferers who have sought in vain for a cure. He says:

I have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and I know that it is all that is claim for it. I had been troubled with piles more or less for about eighteen years and I had tried other remedies, but the piles grew worse until about ten months ago I used the Pyramid Pile Cure. It gave almost instant relief and I have been free from piles ever since. Rev. Jas. H. Wesbrook.

The remedy seems to act equally well in every form of piles, blind, bleeding, protruding or itching. It stops all pain almost immediately, allays irritation and removes constipation, and anyone who has suffered the annoyance and pain of a rectal trouble will appreciate the excellent results which invariably follow the first application of the Pyramid.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich., and for sale by druggists everywhere.

BY E. A. K HACKETT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1895.

THE boom in the price of oil, which it is predicted will reach $2, is having the effect of opening up many oil fields in Indiana and Ohio.

THE authorities of Indianapolis have taken a determined stand against Sunday base ball and will permit no professional games in that city on that day during the present season.

MEREDITH H. KIDD, of Indiana, has resigned as a member of the Dawes commission to investigate the condition of the civilized tribes and will become chairman of the Ute commission.

AS WILL be seen by our local columns, in the article giving an account of the convention of the Baptist Foreign Missionary society of the Northwest, the ladies of eight states will be in our city next week. Over 300 of them will be our guests, and they will be hospitably entertained.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND will pay a tax upon the income from his official salary. That section of the constitution which provides that the president's salary, when fixed by law, shall not be diminished during his term of office, does not exempt his salary from the income tax, according to the president's own interpretation of the constitution, and Mr. Cleveland is credited, even by his political enemies, with being a first-class lawyer.

UNDER our tariff system any remedy for extraordinary high prices of meat in this country is practically denied the people. The tariff levies an absurd and mischievous duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on all imports of cattle, hogs, sheep and other live animals, and also on all imports of fresh beef, mutton and pork and meats of every kind, prepared or preserved, and a still higher duty on poultry. As long as such unwise laws are left by the people on the statute books they can have no adequate protection against their artificial combinations of speculation or the scarcity of cattle in disastrous years of drought, operating to increase the cost of their meat supplies and deprive them of their necessary food.

The Glad Easter Day.

The most distinctive of the Christian festivals is Easter. Unlike Christmas, which has become a great gift holiday, independent of its origin, Easter retains its essential Christian character. To its sacredness, nature adds the hopefulness of an early spring day, as if she, too, were glad, and a cheerful and cheering participant in the observance. In our temperate zone Easter, unless it falls unusually early, or the season be backward, finds the green things of earth sprouting. Here in Indiana the tips of the trees have already given evidence of their good intentions, and the grass will be quickened into full life before many days. The lily is the flower emblem of the day, and florists always have an abundance of them ready. It is few churches that are not brightened on Easter day by some expression of nature's awakening. The flowers join with the special music in announcing tidings as glad as the message of Christmas itself.

Easter Sunday is the greatest festival of the church. It was on this day that our Savior fulfilled His promise to His disciples of rising again three days after His death. Easter Sunday is then the anniversary of His resurrection. The gloom of the crucifixion and the tomb have gone and a joyous triumph over death has come, for Christ, the Savior, lives and the religion which He came to preach is proven to be from God. His resurrection is convincing to us that we, too, shall live and share with Him the joys of Heaven for ever more. As the stones were rolled from His sepulcher so, too, they will be rolled away from ours and we shall share with Him the joy which His triumph and death brought. It is this fact which makes Easter a glad day to all and no wonder that hymns are sung and praises ascend to the God who sent us such deliverance, such cheer, such comfort, such joy.

Easter Sunday is a day of great joy in the church. Her ministers announce to the Christian people the glad tidings of the resurrection. Her altars are made beautiful with flowers and brilliant lights. All that is attractive in music is appealed to to make the day more solemn. Hymns of thanksgiving ascend to Heaven as sweet incense: "Christ is really risen; this is the day which the Lord has made; let us be glad and rejoice therein. Let Israel now say that He is good, that His mercy endureth forever. The Good Shepherd has risen, who has given His life for His sheep, who vochsafed to die for His flock."

Proof against all assault is the reputation of Dr. Price's Baking Powder. Its rivals are routed every time by its superior merits.

How Does She Know?

Helen Keller is the daughter of an editor in Tuscumbia, Ala. Until the age of 3 she saw and heard like other babies. Then an attack of brain disorder deprived her at one fell swoop of sight and hearing. The poor girl was thus doubly barred off from the world.

Yet this remarkable child, now 14 years old, can talk, write and do most of the things that other children with perfect senses can. Deaf as a post, if she were taken to an opera she would enjoy the music with delight as keen as that of any one there. She is an intense lover of music. She knows when any of her family are approaching or whether one coming near her is a stranger. She places one finger across the lips of a person speaking to her, another upon his throat, and thus she understands what is said and answers back as intelligently as if she heard every word. If a dozen gloves belonging to as many different persons were handed to her, she could identify the owner of each and return it to him. This she does by the sense of smell.

The five senses have been resolved by some philosophers into one grand general sense that embraces them all. May it not be that this girl, deprived of the particular powers that would enable her to communicate with the world, has developed the general sense which resolves sight, sound and touch all into one? The theory of vibrations is now put forward to explain many things. Perhaps the vibrations from music touch her brain and body and are thence wafted to the grand inner sense, and then she perceives the music without hearing it. It is the touch of its vibrations that affords her delight. Perhaps, like animals in the natural state, she perceives by the smell those known to her.

A Poet's Prediction.

In more than one instance the great German poet Goethe seemed to possess an intuition which led him to see far into the future. He foretold the building of the Nicaragua canal or some other canal across the isthmus by the United States. In 1827 he said:

It may be foreseen that along the whole coast of the Pacific ocean, where nature has already formed the most capacious and secure harbors, important commercial towns will gradually arise for the furtherance of great intercourse between China and the East Indies and the United States. In such a case it would not only be desirable, but almost necessary, that a more rapid communication should be maintained between the eastern and the western shores of North America, both by merchant ships and men-of-war, than has hitherto been possible with the tedious, disagreeable and expensive voyage around Cape Horn.

It is absolutely indispensable for the United States to effect a passage from the Mexican gulf to the Pacific ocean, and I am certain that they will do it. Would that I might live to see it, but I shall not. I should like to see another thing—the junction of the Danube and the Rhine. But this undertaking is so gigantic that I have doubts of its completion, particularly when I consider our German resources. And, thirdly and lastly, I should wish to see England in possession of a canal through the isthmus of Suez. Would I could live to see these three great works! It should be worth the trouble to last some 60 years more for the purpose.

On the whole, the government makes a good bargain when it pays an annual mail subsidy to the four American liners on condition that they hold themselves in readiness to be used as naval cruisers if they are needed at any time. In a trial of speed one or more of the four would be faster than the swiftest of our regular government cruisers. The Columbia and Minneapolis, the best cruisers of the navy, each cost over $3,000,000 without the armament. The United States first paid for building them and must pay constantly the expense of running them. The ocean steamers that are liable to be pressed into naval service if war should break out were built by a private corporation and pay their own expenses and make money for their owners besides, the government paying merely the annual subvention, a small sum in comparison with the expenses of operating one of these huge liners. The government would be well off if it had half a dozen more such cruisers.

The model tenement house designed by the two girl architects of New York, Mary Gannon and Alice Hand, is believed to furnish the best system of tenement house construction yet hit on. In their plans the airshaft business is done away. There will be a bathroom on every floor, to which the inmates of the houses can go at any time and get a wash and a shower bath. When people begin to take regular baths, they will not be content very long to live in poverty and dirt and be known as the slum population

Card parties will be very popular for the post-lenten season, it is said. Of course, there is not much variety to be obtained in the arrangements for these "small and early" affairs, but a little thought and imagination may help to add new features, making pleasant subjects of conversation which will interest one guests. For instance, for the tally, instead of cards, one can use flowers or tiny bells, hanging, each one, from a bit of ribbon, and, as the guests receive one for each game won, he or she catches the ribbon with a fancy pin provided for the purpose. One of the prettiest designs in tally cards seen in a long time is one decorated in the the fashionable Louise Quinze style, and by the little hearts scattered over it from the hand of a tiny cupid is made clear the fact that it is intended for a hearts party.

THE LOST BARONET.

NORTHEDGE IS HEIR TO MILLIONS, BUT HAS DISAPPEARED.

He Was a Chicago Painter, and After Proving His Claim In England Sailed For New York, Where He Vanished From Sight—Foul Play Feared.

Search is being made in Chicago by agents of English lawyers for Sir George W. Northedge, Bart., of Somersetshire, England, and the possessor of a fortune of something more than $2,000,000, who has mysteriously disappeared and it is feared has met with foul play.

Three years ago Sir George was a painter and contractor in a small way in this city and lived at 3529 State street. At that time he was discovered by a firm of English lawyers who had for ten years been searching for the heirs to the vast property which was awaiting claimants in the English chancery court. Today they are working as industriously to find their titled client as they did then to find the poor contractor. He sailed from Liverpool about a year ago and landed safely in New York, since when nothing has been heard of him, and no drafts have been made upon his London bankers. For this reason his lawyers fear he has been murdered. They say this theory seems not improbable to them, as Northedge made many enemies on account of the attentions he was accustomed to press upon women. He was unmarried, or at least was thought to have been, but it is said had been involved in many intrigues. When publicity was given to the fact that he had become possessed of the title and estates of more than $2,000,000 and was still single he received hundreds of letters from women throughout the country offering their hands and hearts in marriage. In one week more than 1,000 letters came to him, and some of these he answered.

It was only three years ago that Sir George came into his property. Feb. 4, 1892, he was at work painting a building when J. H. Gilchrist, Q. C., of Toronto found him and told him he need work for a living no longer, as he was heir to a landed estate in Somersetshire, to a baronetcy dating to days prior to William the Conqueror and to $1,856,782 in ready money.

Northedge was born March 4, 1841, in Montreal, his father being William Northedge. Both he and his father served in the civil war, he serving in the First battalion of the Connecticut cavalry, enlisting Oct. 26, 1861, and serving until he was severely wounded in the battle of Falmouth, Va.

Northedge had but little money, and the attorneys advanced him enough to carry on his work. In this he was facilitated by the fact that he had received a bequest of £9,000 in 1873 from relatives in Montreal.

Having secured the legal proofs required by the lawyers, Northedge returned to this city and stopped at the Auditorium while he left his lawyers to push his claim. It was at this time that he received word of a second bequest to which he was heir. This amounted to nearly $250,000 and was left by Robert Sheppard of Bath, England, who was a brother of Northedge's grandmother, who was married in Montreal in 1815.

Curiously interwoven with the search for Northedge is the effort being made to find Josie Compaus, who is being sought for by the same people. Miss Compaus was a close friend of Northedge during his stay in this city, and though she never made such a claim it has been said by her friends that she was legally Mrs. Northedge. However this may be, Northedge, after coming into his property, gave her a note for $5,000. This note has never been presented for payment. For some time after Northedge left this city Miss Compaus was known to be here and at times communicated with his lawyers. Recently she, too, has disappeared, and no trace of her can be found. Miss Compaus came to this city from a small town in Michigan. Attracted by the reward offered, several men have already turned up who claim to be Northedge.—Chicago Tribune.

John Fiske an Infant Prodigy.

Professor John Fiske is an able man in several branches of learning. It is interesting to know that, according to a recent biographical sketch of him, he was the prize infant prodigy, in America at least, of modern times. At 7 he was reading Latin authors, at 8 he had read all of Shakespeare and a great deal of Milton, and at 9 he was deep in Greek. He seems indeed to have taken to Greek as a duck takes to water, for at 15 he had dipped into nearly all the extant classical authors and was reading Plato at sight while attending to such incidental recreations as mastering trigonometry, analytical geometry, surveying, navigation, etc. Truly he was a portentous child.

The Man and the Meter.

It is very reprehensible for any citizen to beat the gas meter, but the average man who deals with the meter cannot divest himself of an occasional desire to have it yanked into court or propelled around the back yard with a bandax. The gas meter was not in use when Ananias made his record.—Detroit Free Press.

THE BATTLE ON ST. LOUIS.

It Was Blue Against Black, but the Cadets Were the Victors.

"Attention! Forward, march!"

These were the words of Captain Brown of the Manual Training school, Company C, and instantly 50 pairs of heels ranged themselves in a straight line, and 50 blue coated, blue capped, white gloved boys, "dressing to the front," stepped briskly forward. Not one faltering cadet made a misstep, and everything went along smoothly. At that time the thought of possible wars did not disturb the serenity of the occasion, and it is doubtful whether or not the whole Chinese army and a company of regulars could have scared the cadets to flight, but they had no sooner begun to cross over to the south side of Lucas place than a couple of coal drivers, without even so much as a vestige of blue or the sign of a weapon, appeared upon the scene, and as they were anxious to proceed with their load they did not heed the passing soldiers, but ran their wagon straight through the ranks.

Not thus did the prospective warriors propose to be rudely interfered with, and regardless of their military discipline they broke ranks and pursued the offending coal men. One venturesome boy climbed on the wagon, and had it not been for the poorness of his aim he would probably have severely injured one of the men with a large lump of coal. Neither were the drivers to be "bluffed," for they also tried to ward off their pursuers by chunks of coal large enough to have built a comfortable fire. And so for a few moments the battle raged, coal fighting coal, blue against black. But it was only for a few moments. It did not take long for 50 large sized boys bent on mischief to rout two men, and the drivers were glad to make good their escape. The wagon was quickly taken in charge by the boys, and while a squad was appointed by the captain to watch it the company proceeded on its march as if nothing had happened. The men were pursued some distance, but the best sprinters in the company were unable to get near them.—St. Louis Republic.

Choice Soon Made.

"Can we get anything to eat on the cars, papa?" anxiously inquired the little 4-year-old who was getting ready for her first long railway journey.

"Certainly, Puss," replied her father. "There will be a dining car on the train."

"But we'll get awful hungry waiting for dinner. Won't there be any breakfast car?"

"You don't understand, dear. We shall get our breakfast in the dining car."

"What'll there be to eat?"

"Well, there will be a bill of fare that will have the names of ever so many kinds of food on it. You can have beefsteak, mutton chops and fried chicken, baked potatoes, fried potatoes and boiled potatoes, ham and eggs, oatmeal, hot biscuits, graham bread, raw or cooked fruits, coffee, tea or chocolate. Now, with all that before you, what would you choose?"

"Cake."—Chicago Tribune.

The New Woman.

"I suppose the 'new woman' epidemic hasn't struck your neighborhood yet?" asked the merchant. Mr. Hayes Seed scratched his chin a minute, deep down among the roots of his whiskers, and said:

"The whut?"

"The new woman—the woman who is trying to be a man, you know."

"Oh, I guess she ain't. Er—come to think of it, they was a bearded woman in the side show last summer. Perhaps she was one of 'em."—Cincinnati Tribune.

WOMEN IN THE SPRING.

They Need Nothing So Much as Paine's Celery Compound.

In the spring women need Paine's celery compound.

The average American woman, says a well known writer, wears herself out twenty years before her time. She begins the wearing out process as a child, staying up at night until the whole family retires; and keeps it up as a growing girl, staying awake until 10 or 11 o'clock, when she should be asleep by 9; and as a woman she has so many things to do and to keep up with that she positively hasn't a minute to rest.

By and by her cheeks grow thin and haggard; languor takes the place of her old-time high spirits; she has a generally worn-out air; her nerves are gnawed by pain, and sleeplessness makes fearful inroads upon her health.

Her physician tells her simply that her nervous system is exhausted, and that help must come by feeding the brain and entire nervous tract, richly, rapidly and completely. It is the experience of the most careful medical men in this country that nothing proves so uniformly successful as Paine's celery compound in cases of brain weariness, nervous inability, failure of vital force, dyspepsia, sleeplessness, and for restoring health and vigor to the brain and body when exhausted by overwork or dissipation.

Every such weary, nervous, thin-blooded person should take Paine's celery compound. It makes such people well.

Paine's celery compound improves the general health by making new, ruddy blood and refreshing the nerves. It reanimates the languid body and vitalizes the important organs so that they work in harmony with each other.

The accomplished editor of the Oakland, Ill., Ledger, a portrait of whose paper, editorially:

"Our leading druggist, Dr. W. G. Gregory, informs us that his sales of Paine's Celery compound have been wonderful; in fact, he states that he has in six months sold more celery compound than all other medicines combined. There has been a constant demand for it.

"One of the noticeable cures that this medicine has made is the case of Mr. Phil Clinard, who last spring was republican candidate for county treasurer. Mr. Clinard's nerves were all unstrung; he had no appetite and was all run down. He commenced using Paine's Celery compound, and today there is not a more well and vigorous citizen in this whole community than Mr. Clinard. Another case that comes closer is that of the wife of the editor of the Ledger. Every one in Oakland knows that Mrs. Yeargin was confined to her bed for three whole months with neuralgia. At times her pains were awful, so much so that her hands would clinch and it took the united strength of two persons to straighten out her fingers. Dr. Garvey, the family physician, treated her for months, but all he could do was to alleviate the pains, not effecting a cure. Along last winter she commenced using Paine's Celery compound.

"She commenced to gain in flesh at once. Her pain all went away; her vitality increased weekly, and today there is not a more healthy woman in town than she. Her neighbors all marvel at her complete recovery, and ask her the cause, and she has no hesitancy in saying that it is all due to Paine's Celery compound. This is given voluntarily in the hopes that others who are afflicted may be profited by is without a peer in the land."

SEEING A BLUE LIGHT

MRS GALLUP BREAKS THE PAINFUL NEWS TO HER HUSBAND

The Light Is Seen by Mrs Watkins, and It Means a Sudden Flight Upward Before Another Daybreak—Mr Gallup Remains Calm and Unmoved

(Copyright 1895 by Charles B Lewis)

When Mr Gallup brought out the tin lantern and lighted the tallow candle and started off down town to buy 70 feet of clothesline a cake of shaving soap and two pounds of tenpenny nails Mrs Watkins had just entered the house to tell Mrs Gallup that she might possibly have to borrow two flatirons and a cup of sugar next day Mr Gallup took things easy and did not return for an hour He on tered by the kitchen door blew out his candle and hung up his lantern and after winding his coat tails at the stove for three or four minutes he entered the sit

"I MIGHT AS WELL DIE AS COMFORTABLY AS I KIN"

ting room He had neither seen nor heard from Mrs Gallup but he suspected what had happened He found her in the big rocking chair a towel tied tightly around her head and the camphor bottle in her hand As he entered the room she looked up through her half closed eyes and moaned

Samuel I was afraid you wouldn t git here in time to hear my dyin words and kiss me for the last time on earth! Thank heaven you hev come Samuel kiss me farewell!

Mr Gallup looked up at the clock and saw that it was 20 minutes to 9 Then he went out into the kitchen pulled off his boots by the aid of the bootjack and put ting on his slippers he re entered the sit ting room and sat down to his newspaper

So must continue I Mrs Gallup after several hearty sniffs at the camphor bot tle do you know what Mrs Watkins told me after you went away? She didn t mean to let it out knowin how nervous I am but she told it without thinkin Last night at midnight she thought she heard the cat in the pantry and she got up to see She looked out of the window in this direction and she saw a blue light move from our barn to the hog pen then to the smokehouse then to the house and run along the roof and disappear She was so overcum that she couldn t speak for five minutes and when she got back into bed her feet didn t git warm for an hour Samuel, do you know what that blue light means?"

Mr Gallup was right there within five feet of her and it was reasonable to be lieve that he heard her words but he had nothing to say in reply

It means said Mrs Gallup as she wet the palm of her left hand with the camphor and held it to her nose that I shall never see another sunrise That was a warnin Samuel It was an angel lit ting around to warn me that my time had come at last and it was all arranged for Mrs Watkins to see it and tell me Yes, Samuel you will soon be a widower and I will be at rest Are you sorry?'

Mr Gallup was reading an item about a cucumber nine feet long grown in Cali fornia and while his face wore a smile it was doubtful whether he was smiling over Mrs Gallup s prospective demise or the cu cumber

"I don't a pose you care she went on as she drew the towel a little tighter around her head You ll git a second wife in less n a year and that won t be no end to the way you and her will gad about You ll go to spellin bees and pic nics and temperance lectures, and if she wants a tablecloth costin 75 cents or a 2 shillin dishpan you ll break your neck to git it for her It s ben 13 years sense you painted the kitchen floor but I ll bet you ll do it for your second wife within a week arter you re married"

Mrs Gallup put the camphor bottle on the table and unpinned the towel that she might use it to wipe her eyes and then be gan to weep Mr Gallup didn t know of any reason why she shouldn t weep if she wanted to and about that time also he struck a very interesting item about a new catarrh snuff and wanted to finish it

But I m not complainin, said Mrs Gallup after she had got the best of her emotions I m a Fuller and the Fullers would die afore they would complain I did want to live until I had saved soap grease 'nuff to make a full barl of soft soap, but if I m called I m not goin to hang back If I need any soft soap in heaven, I s pose it ll be furnished and you and your second wife kin buy her soap down here or go without Samuel do you think you ll be lonesome the first night or two after I m gone?'

Mrs Gallup had another fit of weeping as she asked the question, and Mr Gallup kicked off one of his slippers and scratch ed his heel and looked up at the clock and hunted over a whole page of his newspa per before he found another item to at tract his attention

You may be,' said Mrs Gallup as she pulled at her nose with the towel, but you kin go out and see the hogs count the hens and pop corn and cut apples I don t expect you ll do any weepin, but for the looks of things you'd better look rather solemn and not go to the trained hog show which is to be held next week All the mayhem will cum in to console you and when they speak about what a hard workin wife I was and how patient I hev allus bin under all my sufferin's, you d better purtend to wipe the tears away You needn t really break down, but it ll look better to shed at least three tears Samuel, when you see my shoes and dresses and stockin s around and know that I m gone for good and won t never return will —will"—

Just then the clock struck 9 Mr Gal lup got up and proceeded to wind it, went out into the kitchen to see that the door was looked and everything all right and as he returned to the sitting room and car ried the lamp into the family bedroom Mrs Gallup wearily rose up took the towel in one hand and the camphor bottle in the other and followed him, with the remark

"I guess I ll go to bed too As long as I'm goin to expire I might as well die as comfortably as I kin and it will save you liftin me out of the chair and strainin your back I won t take up much room, and I ll perish as gently as possible and if you wake up and find me gone you'll re member that I was a wife who tried to git threw this world without making doctor bills or trouble"

A MAN WITH A SPECIALTY

But No One Would Have Suspected Just What It Was

When the train pulled out of the depot every seat in the car was taken with one ex ception held two persons The exception was occupied by a middle aged man and three or four bundles He knew that three or four passengers were standing up but he put temded to be much interested in his new paper and paid no heed to the gibes and jeers hurled at him The conductor was appealed to but he waved the man up to the end of the car and by a very solemn and sedate looking man in very plain clothes who had watch ed the proceedings with great interest and to one of the irate passengers

Friend I myself am a man of peace and gentleness but shouldst thou insist upon half that seat all my sympathy would be with thee

The person addressed replied that he had a limit land and was not in condition for a row and the man of peace and gentle ness took on dots mother and said

I friend the color of thy hair being red it naturally follows that thou hast grit Shouldst thou strive for half that seat over there I should hope for thee to conquer

The railroaded man acknowledged to the color of the hair and the grit but he exhibited a thumb on which he had had a felon for several weeks and declared his helplessness I crew was yet a third man without a seat and he was he hailed it and addressed with

I friend my ways are ways of peace and gentleness but shouldst thou scuffle to claim one half of that seat I would back thee with my counsel and hope for thy success

The third man said that he had only one lung left and was no fighter and for another quarter of an hour the railroad hog was permitted to enjoy himself un disturbed Then the man of peace rose up removed his overcoat and advancing upon the specimen of human selfishness he said

Friend pardon me whilst I chuck thy bundles on the floor '

You let them bundles alone! exclaim ed the man as he straightened up

They were chucked however and with no gentle hand and as the owner at tempted to get up the man of peace took him by the back of the neck and the shoulder and moved him against the win dow and said

Friend I trust thou wilt excuse me but thee bought only half this seat

The hog declared he would punch some body s head and tried his best to get on his feet but the man of gentleness choked him and bore down on him until he gasped for breath and then quietly said

There will be no punching of heads over this incident Come here, friend and take what belongs to thee

One of the men advanced and sat down, and the old man returned to his ex cement

THOU HAST GOT IT"

and sat Half an hour later he joined me in the smoking car, and I ventured to in quire

Do you belong to the order of Friends?

'Only so far as my speech taketh me he replied Nay nay! I am but an un worthy creature whose specialty is three card monte and draw poker and shouldst thou hanker to beat me at my own game But I didn't hanker and he moved up three seats and beat a farmer out of $15

THE ARIZONA KICKER

A Coroner Who Deserves the Thanks of a Community

A VALUED OFFICIAL —The report of the committee appointed to look over the work of the coroner for the last six months proves that official to be the right man in the right place In Chicago the newspa pers would come right out and call him a Jim dandy, and in St Louis he would be referred to as a treasure on wheels His books show that in the six months he has held 14 inquests, and in every single case he instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of 'heart failure ' We like that term It not only has an aristocratic twang to it but it covers everything liable to happen to misguided humanity in a new country In each and every one of the 14 cases a full personal description has been given all personal property carefully laid aside for future reference and the exact spot where the victim was laid away to rest is marked in red ink on the county map A fond father or an anxious mother in search of a wayward wandering son can arrive here by st go at 10 o clock a m and before 11 have all doubts set at rest as to whether the said w s was taken off by heart failure in this neighborhood By noon, if buried here, flowers can be placed on his grave and a gravestone and curbstone ar ranged for and when the stage leaves at 2 o clock p m the parent can be one of the passengers Under other coroners it used to take from four days to a week to hunt up the particulars concerning a man left hang up to a limb by the cowboys and even then no one was quite sure whether he died of consumption or ap pleas We congratulate both the county and the coroner and trust that the pa rent may bring a boom in inquests and give the official every chance to increase and ex tend his reputation

POOR SHOOTING —Tuesday afternoon just as we had got seated at our desk to open the mail, a stranger wearing a coon skin cap opened the door of our sanctum and uttered a warwhoop and began shoot ing at us right and left handed Half an hour previously we had turned over our guns to the office boy to be cleaned and re loaded and were therefore defenseless As we are seldom shot at thus early in the week we were considerably surprised, and before we had moved from our chair the man had pulled trigger nine times He was trying to get in a tenth shot when our horse editor rushed in from his room and hit him with a baseball bat and disarmed him The blow rendered the man uncon scious for two hours and it was nearly noon next day before he was able to leave town He would give no particulars con cerning himself and when asked why he attempted to murder us he briefly explained that he just thought he d kill an editor The doctors thought him a little 'off' in his head and a dangerous man to be at large Any man who can t do better shoot ing than he did ought not to be allowed to walk around with a couple of guns strap ped to his waist The distance from our desk to the door is only 11 feet and yet not one of his nine bullets even chipped our clothing Had he encountered us on the street he would probably have killed or wounded four or five people while shooting at us There is no question of our being popped over some day but we truly hope it will be by some critter who knows enough to squint his left eye while draw ing a head on us

SOCIETY EVENTS —Several matters of social importance which have been hang ing fire for many months were settled last week and still at 4 30 o clock this morning Mrs Cassidy Wood and Miss Fannie Wood were still in the midst of the excitement and substantial New York types and fashion Ever since the reception given in this town over a month ago Miss Fannie has been the center of society s concentrated ad miration and Mrs Cassidy Wood has been the envy of all other mothers in town Mrs Cassidy Wood has been a society queen for many years and has reigned supreme in the realms of fashion and now divides the honors with her daughter Fannie Wood

WELL PAID EDITORS.

CHARLES A DANA GETS A SALARY OF $50 000 A YEAR

Other New York Journalists Receive Princely Salaries Jack of The Herald Cursed by Jay Gould Lord of The Sun and Nicholson of The Tribune

[By Cable to The Sentinel]

NEW YORK April 8—Charles A Dana editor of the New York Sun if the word of those who ought to know what they are talking about is to be be lieved upon is the best paid journalist in America if not in the world It is said that he receives a salary of $50 000 a year It this be true he pays a handsome part of this out of his own pocket as he is one of the large owners in the Sun corporation although he does not own a controlling interest in the stock

This great salary may possibly account for his often expressed objection to exchanging his desk for a post of honor in the public service It will be remembered that on numerous occasions when Mr Dana has been suggested as a candidate for the presidency he has al ways declined the proffered honor say ing that no post is more honorable or useful than the editorship of a great newspaper

There are several other editors in New York who receive salaries large enough to make office holding unsolicita tive Within the past fortnight I have made a careful attempt to obtain for publication the salaries paid to the lead ing journalists of this city I give the figures as they were given to me The reader may choose between the highest and the lowest figures as his judgment dictates All that I can say is that I have thrown out all estimates which seemed to be at variance with the truth

Mr Carvalho's Career

Probably next to Mr Dana the best paid journalist in New York is Mr S S Carvalho of The World Thirteen years ago Mr Carvalho was a reporter on the staff of The Sun He was one of the most reliable reporters in the city conscientious industrious and persever ing He was a good but not brilliant writer but he seldom was 'left' in se curing news He has a rather cynical vein of thought but absolutely no sense of humor

Perhaps it is because Mr Carvalho sees only the serious side of life that he is Mr Pulitzer s personal representative in the great World establishment and receives a salary which is estimated from $15 000 to $25 000 a year I give credit to the larger amount

He went with Mr Pulitzer as the first city editor of The Evening World eight years ago Later on he became managing editor of that very prosperous paper, and then he was transferred to the parent plant as general manager of the finances His power is almost abso lute and he is said to be closer to the owner than any other man in his em ploy When one considers that it costs about $10,000 a day to publish The World and Mr Carvalho can spend or save $10 000 in a month without mak ing any appreciable difference in the pa per to the reader a salary of $25 000 does not seem to be exorbitant especial ly as The World is credited with mak ing a profit of nearly $1 000 000 a year

Mr Pulitzer's Favorites

I am told that Pulitzer the managing editor of The World gets but $7 500 These figures would be ridiculous ly small if it were not for the fact that the managing editorship of The World since the days of Colonel Cockerill and Ballard Smith is more or less of a nom inal position and is rarely held long by any occupant

In The World office there are always two or three men who are 'near' to Mr Pulitzer They take turns in spend ing a short time with the owner of the paper at his country place in Bar Har bor or his hotel in Paris and they are for the time managing editors in all but name It is commonly reported that Arthur Brisbane receives $150 a week from The World He is supposed to be nearest of all to Mr Pulitzer, except Mr Carvalho He began his work on The Sun as a reporter in 1884 and soon became its star reporter He then went to Europe and began The Sun s cable Sunday letter Soon after Amos J Cum mings started The Evening Sun he be came its managing editor Then it is said he quarreled with Publisher Laf fan and left The Sun s service to take editorial charge of The Sunday World He has been with Mr Pulitzer ever since most of the time in Europe

Most New York newspapers pay their reporters and special writers according to the amount of matter that they write The pay varies from $4 to $8 a column with special prices for special pieces of work Sometimes a newspaper will pay $20 or even $100 a column for an exclu sive article of great news value The usual price on a morning paper is $5 a column Pulitzer is the rule in The Herald, World and Sun offices The Recorder pays $7 The Times and Tribune $6 and The Press, Journal and Advertiser $5

There is probably more mystery re garding the salary paid to W C Reick, city editor of The Herald than there is regarding the compensation of any oth er newspaper editor in New York It is put all the way from $10 000 to $25,000 I think that it is not less than $15 000 as he is by far the ablest executive man that Mr Bennett has had in his employ within the past 15 years Mr Reick s career reads like a story from a book of fairy tales About 1887 when he was less than 25 years old Mr Reick was the Camden correspondent of The Herald He had previously been employed upon the local staffs of one or two Philadelphia newspapers, but was discharged from one of them and then Mr Reick went to London and corresponded for The Herald

Most of my readers will remember that about eight years ago a family of Camden youngsters were bitten by a mad dog The Hoffman dime money out sent the youngsters to Paris where they were successfully treated by Pas teur The whole scheme was of Mr Reick s invention and it attracted the attention of Mr Bennett who had the young man transferred to the New York office Shortly afterward he sent for him and made him the Rome correspondent of The Herald Later on he secured an appointment upon the Paris Herald and when Mr Bennett started the London Herald Mr Reick took charge of its organization, the staff From this post he was promoted to the news editorship of the home paper and then was made city editor

The city editor is virtually the man aging editor of The Herald and in his present place Mr Reick has demon strated his own ability and the sound ness of his employer s judgment His judgment I may remark without any disparagement of Mr Bennett s talent is a newspaper proprietor is not al ways born as fortunate as it is in the present case Here is a story which I have often heard and never heard de nied Many years ago Mr Bennett is said to have met a young man named White who was a very clever bank clerk at that time Mr Bennett was pleased with the young man and made him city editor of The Herald

An Alpha and Omega

On the day of Mr White s debut in metropolitan journalism he kept a dozen or more of The Herald s brightest young men waiting at their desks until long after 3 o clock Then Harold Raymond the crack descriptive writer who always received his assignment among the first went to the foot of the throne and addressed Mr White saying 'Mr White will you have anything for me to do today'

Let me see your name is —

Raymond sir supplied the re porter

Ah yes, Mr Raymond I shall have something for you presently! I am only down to the N s now

Mr White had written on one large sheet of foolscap a list of his assign ments and on another he had set down a list of his reporters in alphabetical or der and he had given the most impor tant story of the day to the man whose name began with A and so on down Mr White soon learned how to do things better and to this day one of the most valued and experienced men in Mr Bennett s employ s

Regarding the salaries paid to other leading men on the New York dailies I am told that they run about as to fol lows

MONROE'S DOCTRINE.

IT WAS ENUNCIATED IN HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE DEC 2 1823

Some Passages Have Since Been Accepted Almost as if a Part of the Written Law Causes That Led to the Utterance—The Result of England's Attitude

On Dec 2 1823 President Monroe transmitted to congress a message in which he set forth what he considered the proper attitude of the government of the United States toward the young republics of South America and the mo tives I hat prompted the people of those republics had formally been sub ject The passages referred to were gen erally approved by the voters of the United States both because the state ments embodied seemed sound and be cause they were uttered during the so called era of good feeling when there was but one political party previous issues of contention having died out and no new ones having risen

So thoroughly was the indorsement of Mr Monroe s utterance that it shortly came to be termed the Monroe doc trine and as such has received the in dorsement of nearly every one ever since Just now a great deal is being said in the new papers about this doc trine the chief occasion being the sus picion that England is about to do some thing in Nicaragua and Venezuela that will conflict therewith

Like most utterances that come to be taken as final by human beings the Monroe doctrine has received divers and many interpretations and hence it is that newspapers and individuals hold ing diametrically opposite views are able to quoting the famous deliverance in support of their own positions and some are giving to it all the importance that it would be accorded a solemn treaty be tween nations or a part of the written law For the benefit of those who have never read the message in which the passages now so often referred to oc curred the essential sentences are here reproduced

We owe it therefore to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers (composing the so called holy alliance) to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety With the existing colonies and dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere But with the governments who have declared their in dependence and maintained it and whose independence we have on great consideration and just principles acknowledged we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States

The occasion for this message was the proposed action of Russia Prussia and Austria the three powers composing the holy alliance The alliance was formed in 1815 for the avowed purpose of protecting and spreading the Chris tian religion but really to check and if possible stop the rising tide of republi canism which had not only become well grounded in America, but had got a very good start in Europe It was pro posed among other things to restore Spanish dominion in South America France had thrown its weight with the allied powers and England had been asked to do so It was England s refusal which led to Monroe s enunciation and it is doubtful that he would have been so outspoken had it not been for definite assurances regarding the attitude of Great Britain

Co operation between the two great English speaking nations of the world was necessary at that time for the wel fare of both The alliance had invaded the United States as well as England to join the compact but it was evident to both governments that neither could hope to gain anything by according— that, on the contrary it would be to the death wound of both Neither however could have well afforded to oppose the alliance single handed but when both declared against the scheme the alliance died a natural death Of course Eng land s attitude was largely the result of selfishness and so indeed was that of the United States—that higher selfish ness which men call patriotism and in which most men take great pride

It was a curious combination of circumstances that made it expedient for this country to join hands with Eng land the only power with which it had ever engaged in serious war and which it had twice defeated It is per haps quite as curious that the skeptical application of the Monroe doctrine was made against England by the United States when England sought to es tablish a protectorate over that part of Central America known as the Mosquito Coast In fact most of the talk concern ing the Monroe doctrine has been in spired by actual or suspected doings on the part of Great Britain and the trou ble in Nicaragua now has to do with the same Mosquito Coast which Great Britain proposed to bring under her do minion many years ago

HOMES OF ACADIANS.

DESCENDANTS OF THE FRENCH EXILES IN LOUISIANA

Their Quaint Old Dwellings and Farms Retain Many Ancient Features The Home Like Old Times and Old Ways Best Tourism a Boon to Acadia

[Special Correspondence]

CARENCRO LA April 8 — Longfellow wished that he had been born by the Vermilion line He deserved the name of all descriptive and historical lines passed to the Lafourche and Teche regions with the usual fortunes of a forgotten race con trasting strongly with the surround ings of their new Louisiana home in the pine stump Creole State Indeed there is not much difference except in climate between the quaint provincialism of these two Acadian parishes and those of Normandy or Brittany and with a little rambling in the old villages one could almost fancy himself in the old Acadian home of the exiles

The Place of Happiness

The Vermilion was in the final act of the world drama which New Scotia s prosperity and unity at once exiled by the British in 1717 from their be loved settlement and in respect of a peaceful race They were simply French people who had emigrated to the new world to seek more favorable conditions They found fertile and attractive sec tions in which to rest and were con tented and happy They called their home Acadia and Cadie the place of happiness and when the tragic event occurred which drove them from the name Acadian clung to them not here they yet lived at

Here among the Louisiana rice and sugar lands where live the descendants of the original exiles who sought free dom and peace under Southern sun

Acadians is a common designation Cadyens it is pronounced by the average citizen and they have come to be thought of as a race apart a people whose native country is not France but Acadia The term is frequently used in deed by those who know nothing of their history

In many respects the exile was of material benefit to this people The climate of Louisiana is far nearer that of France than the coasts of Nova Sco tia The French settlers entered eagerly upon the cultivation of the fertile lands and large plantations with the great white pretentious mansions and a score or two of negro cabins now mingled with the old Acadian homesteads that dot the entire southern Louisiana landscape

Sacred Dwellings

These homesteads are pictures of old time art in architecture and present with their long sloped roof their

outside chimneys and dormers and their quaint porches a most curious appear ance to the stranger Some of these houses like the Andrus house one of the oldest in the parish were built nearly at the beginning of the century The Andrus house was erected in 1815 and is so well preserved that it is by no means a bad dwelling yet It has been the family s headquarters all those fourscore years being handed down from father to son until it has become almost sacred and an offer to purchase a member of the family would be con sidered scarcely less insulting than one to buy the roof which has sheltered sev eral generations of ancestors With this experience duplicated on every hand numbers of these families have gained the designation of aristocracy and they seem to have earned it

A visit to one of these old home steads recalls a new phase of life It is as if one were suddenly transported to a foreign land and were set amid a new people Many of the adult members of Acadian families can speak not English and in the homes French is spoken al most entirely They are conservative in custom and manners clinging tenacious ly to the habits and ways of their fore fathers

Such a business man as one of the leading towns of the parish I went on last summer to the farm of a Cad dyan family and although I was pre pared for considerable primitiveness I did not apprehend that I would see what I did The family was quite poor and perhaps that accounted to some ex tent for the course of diet In the yard was the stump of a pine to It had been hollowed out and there bending over it and working a huge pestle was the husband grinding the meal flour or as near flour as he could approach The grain had been dry hulled and was ground in the mill This was an ex cellent and unobjectionable but as shown that it did not necessarily go afar to find odd customs and ways

Lotus Eaters

On the other hand progressiveness is seen in many of the old French fami lies The younger generations are feel ing the influence of the northern immi gration which is pouring so rapidly in to the south They are having improved machinery and keeping in touch with the modern business life However they do not marry Life is long with them and the boy of southern mixed tempera ments is content a little bewildering at the rush of northern capital and the fact that a mill in his sugar district did not turn its wound fruit or drive the cattle shed path or treat of sirup until two or three old hogs had dried up

It is a notable fact proud of its old French customs and the written evidences of their ancestry to New Orleans further north to be educated up round turned goose fat is to all that Children to New England village complete by forgetting all those differences Their natural ly liberal complexions are made still more by the exquisite care taken of the baby the Acadian young and old The general well formed limbs and the luxuriously dark hair noted on every hand and a childlike expression of trustfulness is seen in many faces

Education is everywhere in evidence in Acadiana The fragrance of the pines of Evangeline is spread over the people in the studious among them are the family familiar with the event of the fatal departure from their native land for the birth place or home of ancestors

LONDON'S LITERARY LION

Novelist Crockett His Early Poverty and His Successful Literary Career

The latest literary lion of London, S R Crockett author of The Raiders' The Stickit Minister and other delightful books of Scottish life has fought his way to the front with rare pluck and persistence Early in life his father died and he was brought up by his grandparents They were the strict est of Cameronians and considered Shakespeare and Scott very sinful writ ers Young Crockett did not share their belief however and read the plays of the Bard of Avon and the novels of the great Scotchman on the sly When not 8 years old he walked many miles each day to and from the school at Dumfries At that time he had associ ated so little with children that he hardly knew how a little girl looked His grandparents were very poor and when he became older he was compelled to earn his further education by teach ing and writing He lived on $3 16 a week and when he needed new books did the work of a day laborer on Satur days to earn the purchase money

Despite his lack of advantages and his poverty young Crockett was gradu ated from Edinburgh university worked his way through Oxford and took de grees at Heidelberg and Neufchatel He also traveled extensively on the conti nent and then returned to his native wards in Galloway He did a great deal of ordinary newspaper work on Edinburgh papers and finally became a clergyman He married Miss Milner, daughter of George Milner and in 1887 began preaching at Penicuik a little town of 3 000 inhabitants

S R CROCKETT

His salary was very small and in order to increase his income he wrote letters for the Glasgow Christian Lead er for $50 a year One week in place of his usual letter he sent a short sketch describing a day in the life of Rev James Pethye This sketch was so clever that it attracted wide attention and en couraged the young author to continue writing fiction His first book was a book of poems and his fellow country man Robert Louis Stevenson was his literary godfather His work soon be came so much in demand that he ceased his ministerial duties and devoted him self entirely to literature His novels and stories from the present time until 1900 are all engaged, and the man who was unknown two years ago is now on the top wave of successful authorship

THE GATES OF HEAVEN.

There is a World Somewhere Where There is No Darkness

Twelve Cities That Each Which Is on Each Side to Enter It—A Few Words About Bigotry and Sectarianism—A Sermon by Rev Dr T DeWitt Talmage D D

Rev Dr Talmage took for his subject Sunday The gates of heaven the text being Revelation xxi 13 On the east three gates on the north three gates on the south three gates on the west three gates

The Cashmere gate of Delhi where converged a heroism that makes ones nerves tingle the Lucknow gate still dented and scarred with sepoy boldardment the Madeline gate with its embazonry in bronze the hundred gates of Thebes the wonder of centuries all go out of sight before the gates of my text

Our subject speaks of a great metropolis the existence of which many have doubted Standing on the wharf and looking off upon the harbor and seeing the merchantmen coming up the bay the flags of foreign nations streaming from the topgallants you immediately make up your mind that those vessels came from foreign ports and not from

That is from Hamburg and that is from Marseilles and that is from Southampton, and that is from Havana, and your supposition is accurate But from the city of which I am now speaking no weather beaten merchantmen or frigates with scarred bulkhead have ever come There has been a vast emigration into that city but no emigration from it so far as our natural vision can descry

"There is no such city," says the undevout astronomer I have stood in high towers with a mighty telescope and have swept the heavens and I have seen spots on the sun and caverns in the moon but no towers have ever risen on my vision, no palaces, no temples no shining streets no massive wall There is no such city Even very good people tell me that Heaven is not a material organism but a grand spiritual fact and that the Bible descriptions of it are in all cases to be taken figuratively I bring in reply to this what Christ said and he ought to know "I go to prepare—not a theory not a principle, not a sentiment, but

I go to prepare a place for you The resurrected body implies this If my foot is to be reformed from the dust, it must have something to tread on If my hand is to be reconstructed it must have something to handle If my eye, having gone out in death is to be rekindled I must have something to gaze on Your adverse theory seems to imply that the resurrected body is to be hung on nothing or to walk in air, or to float amid the intangibles You may say if there be material organisms then a soul in Heaven will be cramped and hindered in its enjoyments but I answer Did not Adam and Eve have plenty of room in the garden of Eden? Although only a few miles would have described the enclosure of that place, they had ample room And do you not suppose that God, in the immensities can build a place large enough to give the whole race room even though there be material organisms?

Herschel looked into the heavens As a Swiss guide puts his Alpine stock between the glaciers and crosses over from crag to crag so Herschel planted his telescope between the worlds and glided from star to star until he could announce to us that we live in a part of the universe but sparsely strewn with worlds and he peers out into immensity until he finds a region no larger than our solar system in which there are 50 000 worlds more And Prof Lang says that by a philosophic reasoning there must be somewhere a world where there is no darkness, but everlasting sunshine so that I do not know but that it is simply because we have no telescope powerful enough that we can not see into the land where there is no darkness at all and catch a glimpse of the burnished pinnacles As a conquering army marching on to take a city comes at nightfall to the crest of a mountain from which in the midst of the landscape they see the castles they are to capture and rein in their war chargers, and halt to take a good look before they pitch their tents for the night so now, coming as we do on this mountain top of prospect, I command this regiment of God to rein in their thoughts and halt and before they pitch their tents for the night take one good long look at the gates of the great city On the east three gates, on the north three gates and on the west three gates

In the first place I want you to examine the architecture of those gates Proprietors of large estates are very apt to have an ornamental gateway Sometimes they spring an arch of masonry the posts of the gate flanked with lions in statuary, the bronze gate a representation of intertwining foliage, bird haunted, until the hand of architectural genius drops exhausted all its life frozen into the stone Gates of wood and iron and stone guarded nearly all the old cities Moslems have inscribed upon their gateways inscriptions from the Koran of the Mohammedan There have been a great many fine gateways, but Christ sets his hand to the work and for the upper city swung a gate such as never ever gazed on, untouched of inspiration With the nail of his own cross he cut into its wonderful traceries stories of past suffering and of gladness to come There is no wood or stone or bronze in that gate, but from top to base and from side to side it is all pearl, Not one piece picked up from Ceylon banks and another piece from the Persian gulf, and another from the island of Margarette but one solid pearl picked up from the beach of everlasting light by Heavenly hands and hoisted and swung amid the shouting of angels The stones of alabaster vase and porphyry pillar fade out before this gateway It puts out the spark of feldspar and diamond You know how one little precious stone on your finger will flash under the gas light But oh the brightness when the great gate of Heaven swings, struck through and dripping with the light of eternal noonday!

Julius Cæsar paid 1 000 crowns for one pearl The government of Portugal boasted of having a pearl larger than a pear Cleopatra and Philip II dazzled the world's vision with precious stones But gather all these together and lift them, and to add to them all the wealth of the pearl fisheries and set them in the panel of one door and it does not equal this magnificent gateway An almighty hand hewed this swung this polished this Against this gateway on the one side dash all the splendors of earthly beauty Against this gate, on the other side beat the surges of eternal glory Oh, the gate, the gate! It strikes an infinite charm through every one that passes it One step this side of the gate and we are paupers One step the other side of the gate, and we are kings The pilgrim of earth going through seas in the one huge pearl all his earthly tears in crystal O gate of light, gate of pearl gate of Heaven for our wearied souls at last spring open!

When shall these eyes thy heaven built walls
And pearly gates behold
Bulwarks with salvation strong
And streets of shining gold

Oh Heaven is not a mud place Heaven is not a contracted place Heaven is not a stupid place I saw twelve gates and they were twelve pearls

In the second place I want you to count the number of those gates Imperial parks and lordly mansions are apt to have one expensive gateway and the others are ordinary but look around at these entrances to Heaven and count them One two three four, five six seven eight nine ten eleven twelve Heaven all the world and all the Heaven Twelve

I count this number I find in sharp sectarianism If the Episcopalian is bigoted he brings his Westminster assembly catechism and he makes the gateway out of that and he says to the world You go through there or stay out If a member of the Reformed church is bigoted he makes the gate out of the Heidelberg catechism and he says You go through there or stay out If a Methodist is bigoted he plants two posts and he says

Now you crowd in between those two posts or try out Perhaps an Episcopalian may say Here is a liturgy out of which I mean to make a gate go through or stay out Or a Baptist may say Here is a dipping gate You go through that or you must stay out And so in all our churches and in all our denominations there is no man who make one gate for themselves and then demand that the whole world go through it I object to this on principles of religious views Oh small souled man who did God give you the contract for making gates I tell you plainly I will not go through that gate I will go in at any one of the twelve gates I choose Here is a man who says I can more easily and more closely approach God through a prayer book I say My brother, then use the prayer book Here is a man who says I believe there is only one mode of baptism and that is immersion Then I say Let me plunge you? Anyhow, I say away with the gate of rough hewn and rotten posts and rusted hinges when there are twelve gates, and they are twelve pearls

The fact is that a great many of the churches in this day are being constructed to death They have been trying to find out all about God's decrees and they want to know who are elected to be saved and who are reprobated to be damned and they are hanging on discussing that subject when there are millions of souls who need to have the truth put straight at them Here six counting the number of teeth in the jawbone with which Samson slew the Philistines They sit on the beach and see a vessel going to pieces in the offing and instead of getting into a boat and pulling away for the wreck they sit discussing the different styles of oarlock God intended us to know some things and intended us not to know others I have heard scores of sermons explanatory of God's decrees but come away more perplexed than when I went The only result of such discussion is a great fog Here are two truths which are to conquer the world—man a sinner Christ a Saviour You man who adopts these two theories in his religious belief shall have my right hand in warm grip of Christian brotherhood

A man comes down to a river in time of freshet He wants to get across He has to swim What does he do? The first thing is to put off his heavy apparel and drop everything he has in his hands He must go empty handed if he is going to the other bank And I tell you when we have come down to the river of death and find it swift and raging we will have to put off all our sectarianism and lay down all our cumbrous creed and empty handed put out for the other shore What sin you would you resolve all the Christian church into one kind of church? Would you make all Christendom worship in the same way by the same forms? Oh, no You might as well decide that all people shall eat the same kind of food without reference to appetite or wear the same kind of apparel without reference to the shape of their body, Your ancestry your temperament your surroundings will decide whether you go to this or that church and adopt this or that church polity One church will best get one man to Heaven and another church another man I do not care which one of the gates you go through if you only go through one of the 12 gates that Jesus lifted

Well now I see all the redeemed of earth coming up toward Heaven Do you think they will all get in? Yes Gate the first the Moravians come up they believed in the Lord Jesus they pass through Gate the second, the Quakers come up they have received the inward light they have trusted in the Lord they pass through Gate the third the Lutherans come up they had the same grace that made Luther what he was and they pass through Gate the fourth Baptists pass through Gate the fifth the Free Will Baptists pass through Gate the sixth the Reformed church passes through Gate the seventh the Congregationalists pass through Gate the eighth the German Reformed church passes through Gate the ninth the Methodists pass through Gate the tenth, the Sabbatarians pass through Gate the eleventh, the Church of the Disciples pass through Gate the twelfth the Presbyterians pass through But there are a great part of other denominations who must come in, and great multitudes who connected themselves with no visible church but felt the power of godliness in their heart and followed it in their life Where is their gate? Will you shut all the remaining hosts out of the city? No They may come in at our gate Hosts of God, if you can not get admission through any other entrance come in at the twelfth gate Now they mingle before the throne

Looking up at the one hundred and forty and four thousand you can tell which gate they come in One Lord One faith One baptism One glass see One doxology One triumph One Heaven! Why, I either how did you get in?' 'I came through the third gate' 'Cranmer how did you get in?' 'I came through the eighth gate Adoniram Judson how did you get through?' 'I came through the seventh gate' 'Hugh McNeil the martyr how did you get through?' 'I came through the twelfth gate' Glory to God, twelve gates but one Heaven

In the third place, notice the points of the compass toward which these gates look They are not on one side or on two sides or three sides but on four sides This is no fancy of mine, but a distinct announcement On the north three gates, on the south three gates on the east three gates on the west three gates What does that mean? Why it means that all nationalities are included, and it does not make any difference from what quarter of the earth a man comes up If his heart is right there is a gate open before him On the north three gates That means mercy for Lapland and Siberia and Norway and Sweden On the south three gates That means pardon for Hindustan and Algiers and Ethiopia On the east three gates That means salvation for China Japan and Borneo On the west three gates That means redemption for America It does not make any difference how dark skinned or how pale faced men may be They find a gate right before them Those plucked in rims under a tropical sun Those snot nosed Esquimaux snows behind reindeer from Mexican plateau from home campaign from Chinese tea field from Holland dike from Scotch highlands, they come they come Heaven is not monopoly for new creations souls Rich as Winans aristocrat only few royal families Heaven a small town with small population? Not John says it and he noted that in an elevation next to the measured it this way and when they measured it that way and when they measured it it was 1 500 miles so that Babylon and Thebes and Nineveh and St Petersburg and Canton and Pekin and Paris and London and New York and all the dead cities of the past and all the living cities of the present added together would not equal the census of that great metropolis

Wandering along a street you can by the costume of the dress of the face guess where a man comes from You say That is a Frenchman that is a Norwegian that is an Ancient But the gates that gather in the nations will bring them in irrespective of nationality Foreigners so long apt to get homesick Some of the tenderest and most pathetic stories have been told of those who left their native clime and longed for it until they died But the Swiss coming to the high residence of Heaven will not long cry more for the Alps standing amid the eternal hills The Russian will not long cry more for the luxuriant harvest fields left now in the hands of the hum and the rustle of the harvest of everlasting light Heavy tones from earth will not long to go back again to the earthly country now that they stand in the palaces of the sun Those who once lived among the groves of spice and oranges will not long to return now that they stand under the trees of life that bear 12 manner of fruit

While I catch an everlasting throng is pouring through the gate They are going up from Senegambia from Patagonia from Madagascar from Hongkong What you say, do you introduce all the heathen into glory? I tell you the fact is that a majority of the people in those climes die in infancy and the infants all go straight into eternal life and so the vast majority of those who die in China and India the vast majority of those who die in Africa go straight into the skies—they die in infancy One hundred and sixty generations have been born since the world was created and so I estimate there must be 1 000 000 000 children in glory If at a concert 2 000 children sing you out is refined within you On the transport when 1 000 000 000 little ones stand up in white before the throne of God, their chanting drowning out all the stupendous harmonies of Dusseldorf and Dupont Pour in through the twelve gates

Oh we redeemed banner lifted rank after rank saved battalion after saved battalion until the city of God shall hear the trump trump Crowd all the twelve gates Room yet Room or the thrones Room in the mansions Room on the river bank Let the trumpet of invitation be sounded until all earth's mountains hear the shrill blast and glens echo it Let mountains catch it in pagoda and cathedrals sound it across the western prairies Shout it to the Laplander on his swift sled Hallo it to the Bedouin careering across the desert News New Glorious Heaven and twelve gates to get into it! Hear it! Oh you thin blooded nations of eternal winter—on the north three gates Hear it! Oh, you bronzed inhabitants panting under equatorial heats—on the south three gates

But I notice when John saw these gates they were open—wide open They will not always be so After while Heaven will have gathered up all its intended population and the children of God will have come home Every crown taken Every harp struck Every throne mounted All the glories of the universe harvested in the great garner And, Heaven being made up of course the gates will be shut Austria in, and the first gate shut Russia in and the second gate shut Italy in, and the third gate shut Egypt in and the fourth gate shut Spain in, and the fifth gate shut France in, and the sixth gate shut England in and the seventh gate shut Norway in and the eighth gate shut Switzerland in and the ninth gate shut Hindustan in and the tenth gate shut Siberia in and the eleventh gate shut All the gates are closed but one Now let American go in with all the islands of the sea and all the other nations that have called on God The captives all freed The harvests all gathered The nations all saved The flashing splendor of this last pearl begins to move on its hinges Let two mighty angels put their shoulders to the gate and heave it to with silvery clang It is done It thunders The twelfth gate shut

Once more I want to show you the gatekeepers There is one angel at each one of those gates You say that is right Of course it is You know that no earthly palace or castle or fortress would be safe without a sentry pacing up and down by night and by day and if there were no defenses before Heaven and the doors set wide open with no one to guard them all the vicious of earth would go up after awhile, and all the abandoned of hell would go up after awhile, and Heaven instead of being a world of light and joy and peace and blessedness would be a world of darkness and horror So I am glad to tell you that while these 12 gates stand open to let a great multitude in there are 12 angels to keep some people out Robespierre can not go through there nor Hildebrand nor Nero, nor any of the debauched of earth who have not repented of their wickedness If one of those nefarious men who despised God should come to the gate one of the keepers would put his hand on his shoulder and push him into outer darkness There is no place in that land for thieves and liars and whoremongers and defrauders and all those who disgraced their race and fought against them God If a miser should get in there he would pull up the golden pavement If a hideous burner should get in there he would set fire to the mansion If a libertine should get in there he would whisper his abominations standing on the white coral of the sea beach Only those who are blood washed and prayer tipped will get through Oh my brother if you should at last come up to one of the gates and try to get through and you had not a pass written by the crushed hand of the Son of God the gatekeeper would wheel on a glance wither you forever

A novel form of private schooner passed through Boone County, Neb., headed westward recently The front truck was a sulky plow with the plow removed and the hind truck was a corn cultivator The connecting bed was a blacksmith's bellows and the outfit was drawn by a couple of cows

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

WHAT WILL THE END BE?

Appalling Figures Showing the Increase of the Defective Classes

One of the things which give the most concern to all interested in the welfare and progress of the nation is the ugly fact that the total number of the defective classes—the insane, idiotic the epileptic the deaf and dumb the habitual criminals and outcasts of all kinds and the paupers—increases at a greater ratio than the total population That the number of these unfortunates bears a much greater proportion to the population should be shown by the census every ten years It needs this announcement, that that fact is steadily increasing with every decade There is not room for this decision admitted by all neurologists and medical authorities and that reason is temperance

The authorities agree that three fourths of the criminal insanity is the direct or indirect result of inebriate and dependent classes who being incapable of maintaining themselves, become a charge upon the state and pass by scores in their numbers steadily increase the burden of their maintenance becomes heavier and heavier upon the taxpayers Our prisons are enlarged to find more room for the increased number of criminals, our asylums and hospitals are added to that room is to be made for the unfortunates who need them shelter our poorhouse are crowded with the homeless and helpless and drunk as the fons et origo mali—the great cause of the states being compelled to imprison or shelter fully three fourths of the sum total of all these people

We shall leave the discussion of the points summed side of this problem—the enormous burden it imposes upon the tax payers and consequently upon every citizen—for some future occasion But we wish to call the attention of every one to the ethical side of the problem The steady increase of these defective classes means a retrogressive of the mental powers of the masses Is it not certain that for every one so mentally or physically deficient as to need maintenance at the public expense there must be seven—a dozen or more perhaps—who are weakened in intellect and body but not to so great a degree—Toledo Blade

THE PUREST AND BEST

How a Hotel Clerk Fought a Group of Lumbermen on Important Issue

Some time ago eight or ten lumbermen went into a hotel in one of our western cities and engaged a private

FOREST ARTICLE IN THE UNITED STATES

parlor They were jolly well to do fellows and met to settle up their business over a social glass having had a successful speculation together Summoning the gentlemanly clerk of the house they ordered him to bring in the choicest liquor to be obtained

nothing but the purest and finest article

The table was spread glasses brought out and mirth and jollity prevailed Presently in came the clerk with a silver pitcher of ice water, and as he filled each goblet with quiet dignity he remarked Gentlemen I have done the best I could to obey your order and here is the purest article to be found in the United States

All looked in dumb amazement at so unexpected and so ludicrous was their position But they were equal to the occasion Not a word was said till each had his glass before him filled with the sparkling fluid Almost simultaneously they all raised their glasses, and pledging each other's health made the additional pledge not to drink anything stronger for the year to come Nearly twelve months have passed and they have been loyal to their vow May we not hope that the pledge may be renewed for life—Zion's Watchman

Well he kept the pledge and when I would drink with me I'd pay it all then all I could not do that But I would not buy the drink for the money I just would not get the drink

Many a wretched drunkard's death could be traced to the first drink taken in company with friends

As the accounts of the awful sufferings of the victims of delirium tremens are given in all their horrible details in the daily papers it would seem that no one could be found to take the first drink

But the fact seems to be forgotten by all that the first drink is the one that makes the drunkard

MORPHINE MADMAN.

Thrilling Experience of Dr. Wilcox With a Morphine Eater.

Who Attacks the Physician With a Surgeon's Knife—Conquered by Chloroform.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 13.—Dr. W. O. Wilcox the demonstrator of anatomy in the California Medical college, had a narrow escape from death yesterday at the hands of a maddened morphine eater. Dr. Wilcox returned from the college of the faculty about 12 o'clock to the patient's sitting room stood a young man of about twenty years of age with that sallowness of complexion which indicated the excessive use of some deadly drug. His eyes glared fiercely and he trembled with the suppressed excitement.

"He told me he desired to see me urgently," said Dr. Wilcox, in speaking of the affair. "I detected that he was a morphine fiend and as I did not care to treat such patients, I told him he would have to go elsewhere. I entered the consulting room, and despite my protest he followed me. I threatened to remove him, whereupon he burst into tears and begged I would give him only one 'shot' of the drug. I hesitated, when his manner became threatening. In the next moment I was in the presence of a madman. The morphine fiend now commanded that the request be complied with. On the operating table lay a keen edged surgeon's knife, with a six inch blade. The madman's attention was directed toward it and in another moment he had possessed himself of it."

"Give me morphine or I'll cut your heart out," he hissed.

Dr. Wilcox did not lose his presence of mind nor evince any fear, and laughed at the fellow's threat.

"I thought of calling for help," said he, "but I felt that I would precipitate matters. The fellow showed by his conduct that he thought only of wreaking vengence on me and, in fact, he had forgotten all about the morphine. I stood near my drug case and the first object upon which my eye rested was a six ounce bottle of chloroform. I quickly grabbed it and had hardly risen when the fiend made a lunge at me with the knife. I removed the cork and, as he followed me, I dashed some of the liquid into his face. It stopped him for a moment and in the interval I soaked my handkerchief with the fluid. He sprang at me again and the next instant I grabbed his right arm with my left hand and with the other held the saturated cloth over his mouth and nostrils. He struggled furiously, but as he was physically weak, I succeeded in holding him long enough to give the chloroform a chance to do its work. He sank to the floor completely anesthetized. I then gave him a shot of morphine, and when he regained consciousness he disclaimed all knowledge of his attack upon me and left the office. I never saw him before, and hope never to see him again."

Dr. Wilcox escaped without a scratch but his coat was badly cut.

Will Not Retire From the Supreme Bench.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 13.—Local democrats do not look upon the retirement of Chief Justice Stephen G. Field as likely to take place soon. The pressure that is being brought to bear to induce him to retire, they say, may be true, but when it would be as a punishment for doing what he considered his duty, they think he will hardly yield. Some time ago Field made known his intention of retirement. He changed his mind, but that circumstances gave credit to the rumor that he was about to yield to the demands of his enemies and carry out his first decision. "Judge Field will not retire," was what Governor Budd had to say about the matter.

"Who would probably succeed him if he should withdraw from his position?"

"Well, I don't think he will withdraw, but if he should, there is only one logical successor. That is Wm. T. Wallace. I consider him the foremost jurist of this country today. There is not another man who could so nobly fill the place as he."

Congressman James G. McGuire was quite certain that Mr. Field had absolutely no intention of retiring. He, too, however, favors Judge Wallace as Field's successor in case of the latter's retirement and other democratic politicians and lawyers take the same view.

PENNILESS AND FRIENDLESS.

Thompson, the Fugitive Bank Cashier, in Hard Luck.

SEDALIA, Mo., April 13.—James C. Thompson, the fugitive cashier of the defunct First National bank, is reported to be penniless in the City of Mexico. He complains bitterly of the treatment of friends, many of whom he claims refuse to answer his letters. He says that he has often gone hungry. He is out of employment and bitterly denounces Missouri papers for the manner in which they have referred to him.

A good sum for a superior article is real economy. That is why Dr. Price's Baking Powder is a good investment.

Colorado Cattle.

DENVER, April 13.—Reports all show that Colorado cattle are doing finely and have gone through the winter in better shape than for four years. But for the unfortunate sand storms of a week ago the loss in Colorado could have been practically nothing. Returns from the northeast show all the way from 10 to 20 per cent of the loss the average is put in Denver for the northwest portion of the state at less than 15 per cent, while in the Arkansas valley the loss will not exceed 5 per cent.

SILVER ADVOCATES.

Leading Agitators Assembled in Chicago Today.

Will Endeavor to Persuade Illinois to Endorse the Free Silver Idea in the State Campaign.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The free silver party has its headquarters in Chicago today. This morning Gen. A. J. Warner the chairman of the national committee, and Congressman Joe Sibley, one of its distinguished presidential possibilities, arrived at the Auditorium. They were met by Charles Miller, Sibley's business partner, Colonel Turner, the leader of the free silver party in Michigan, and General Wolcott. This afternoon they were joined by Senator Jones of Nevada, and tonight they will leave for the west. Today a conference was held with some of the Chicago silver people to canvass the result of the anticipated declaration on free silver in Illinois, and to set in motion the arrangements for a monster free silver mass meeting to offset the one being arranged for by the Chicago gold men.

CHOLERA IN CAMP.

Over 800 Japanese Soldiers Die From the Disease.

The Epidemic Rages on the Pescadore Islands, Where Troops Are Massed in Great Numbers.

LONDON, April 13.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon publishes a dispatch from Hiogo, Japan, which says that advices from the Pescadore Islands state that the Japanese forces are still at those islands awaiting reinforcements, and that over 800 deaths from cholera have occurred among the troops. The epidemic, it is added, is now abating. Two ships which have arrived at Greenwood recently from the Pescadore Islands, have reported deaths from cholera during the voyage. The vessels have been disinfected and released.

SUNDAY BASE BALL.

Indianapolis Will Wrestle With the Problem Tomorrow.

The Ball Club Determined to Play and the Officials Issue a Manifesto to Preventive Comics.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 13.—Interesting times are expected at the ball park tomorrow when the game between the Indianapolis and Cleveland clubs is to be played, or at least attempted. The police department and the sheriff have declared that no Sunday games shall be played in this (Marion) county, while the club management have determined to the contrary. The grounds for Sunday games are just outside the city limits, but the corporate jurisdiction of the city takes them in.

The arrests will be made at the first toss of the ball, and not only will the man be arrested but the game, the authorities say, will not be allowed to continue.

TOTALLY WRECKED.

A Pennsylvania Store Demolished by an Explosion.

The building, which was 125 feet long, had both ends blown out and the interior totally wrecked. The damage will amount to $13,000. The explosion is thought to have been the work of enemies of Keller & Son. It is not known what kind of explosive was used.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 13.—It is reported here that a bunch of cattle numbering several train loads from Arizona for Hoover, has been detained at Wallace for sometime on account of sickness which broke out among the cattle. Between sixty and seventy had died within two days. The cause of the sickness was a matter of speculation at first, but it was finally given out that the animals were suffering from alkali water which they drank en route.

MAKING FORTUNES.

The Oil Men Reaping a Harvest of Dollars.

From the Advance of $1.05 in Oil Selling on Pittsburg Today for $1.25 a Barrel.

OIL CITY, Pa., April 13.—The advance of 25 cents in Lima and Indiana oil yesterday was followed this morning by a notice from the Soap purchasing agency that it would pay $1.75 a barrel for Pennsylvania credit balances. This is an advance of 25 cents a barrel from Thursday prices and had prompt effect on the speculative oil market.

The long period of stagnation preceding the present advance of nearly $1.05 per barrel for the commodity had driven the majority of the brokers and speculators into other business and to other portions of the country. But the half hundred of the old guard that have stood the speculative battles and storms of the speculative adversity from 1870 until now are reaping a wonderful harvest of good round dollars in profits and brokerage, as this is the only oil exchange left of the many once established at New York, Pittsburg, Bradford, Petrolia, Parker, Warren and Titusville.

From all over the country orders are coming from would be speculators attracted by the unprecedented steady and great increase in prices. The limited number of certificates, about 750 in all, prevents dealing in extensive lots but the width of the fluctuations more than make up any discrepancy in the excitement and uncertainty of the business and the game is heavy enough to suit the most hardened speculator, gambler or spendthrift.

On Monday of this week the market closed at $1.30 and at 11:15 today was selling at $1.56, an advance of 56 cents in six days, and advance of more than 10 cents a day for the week, and one day of it was a holiday. Although there was some realizing of profits on Thursday and today, the majority of the buying today was for speculative investment. It opened excited and strong with sales $1.00, or 21 cents higher than on the eve of Good Friday. In less than ten minutes after the opening sales had been made at $1.05 and at $1.92½, there was a fair volume of trading and no signs of a break in the bull movement. At 11:30 prices advanced to $1.06½, and at 11:50 a. m. 15,000 barrels were sold at $2. The close was steady with sales $1.90 cash and bid.

From far off southern Africa came orders for Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

STATE HOUSE ON FIRE.

Illinois' Magnificent $7,000,000 Building Badly Damaged.

Fire Breaks Out in the Noon Hour, When None But the Clerks Are in the Structure.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 13.—Illinois' magnificent five million dollar state house caught fire in the senate wing shortly after noon today and in a few moments it looked as if that portion would be gutted. The fire is supposed to have originated in one of the committee rooms, but from what cause, it is not known. An alarm was at once turned in and two steam and one chemical engine responded. Fire Marshal Fountain soon discovered he would be unable to control the fire with that force, and so turned in a general alarm, calling for all of the engines in the city. The fire spread rapidly and soon the whole of the immense building was filled with smoke, so that it was with great difficulty that the firemen could find their way through the labyrinth of hallways and rooms of the upper part of the capitol. The wing of the capital where the fire was raging was where the auditors office, the state treasurer and the office of the insurance commissioner and agricultural board are located.

At once when the fire broke out, with confusion prevailed among the clerks of the various departments and soon the halls were filled with excited girls and women. The chiefs of departments remained cool, however, and in a few minutes all of the valuable papers and records were locked up in the fire proof vaults. Assistant Treasurer Whitemore at once ordered his clerks to lock up all the money and books of his office and then with them beat a hasty retreat.

In Auditor Gore's office matters did not run so smoothly. In that department many women are employed and they became badly frightened, increasing the confusion. With much difficulty the books, papers and records were bundled into the vault.

Meantime the fire continued to spread. There was not enough fire plugs near the state house to keep the engines working, so the firemen had to labor at a great disadvantage. The firemen reported shortly that all the committee rooms in the senate wing and senate chamber were ruined and that the fire would probably reach four $500,000 to $750,000, and unless the fire was soon checked, would probably reach $1,000,000.

While the state house has been regarded as practically fire proof, the floors of all committee rooms and partitions were of wood and, being extremely dry, burned like tinder.

The roof was made of slate and the beams supporting it of steel but it was said that if the fire was not soon checked the intense heat inside of the lamp there that the roof will fall through, the dome, 365 feet in height, would collapse. In such an event the loss would reach from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

The fire was probably started from a tinner's stove, a large force of tinners having been sent in on the roof this morning to make repairs. It is said they left their stoves when they went to dinner. A gale of wind was blowing during the fire and the firemen seemed to be unable to cope with the flames. The senate chamber was speedily gutted and all the expensive furnishing is ruined.

At 1:45 p. m. the firemen at last got the flames under control. It is reckoned that the damage to the senate wing of the state house will amount to from $750,000 to $1,000,000. Most of the damage will result from smoke and water.

SENTENCED.

Elijah Robinson Given a Three Months' Sentence.

He Fleeced the Public, Including Fort Wayne People, in His Ladies' Gem Publication.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 13.—Elder Elijah Robinson, who fleeced thousands of people throughout the country by means of a publication called the Ladies' Gem Monthly, a fake rebus and logic watch scheme, was today sentenced in the United States court to three months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $250. Robinson was arrested here several months ago for violating the postal laws. He prayed his bail bond of $1,000 and fled the country. Recently he turned up in Chicago where he again commenced operating the same sort of a swindle. He was arrested by the United States authorities in Chicago and sent back to Cleveland for trial.

I had been troubled with piles more or less for about eighteen years, and I had tried other remedies, but the piles grew worse until about ten months ago I used the Pyramid Pile Cure. It gave almost instant relief and I have been free from piles ever since." Hon. Jas. H. Weatherwax.

The remedy seems to act equally well in every form of piles, blind, bleeding, protruding or itching. It stops all pain almost immediately, allays irritation and removes constipation, and anyone who has suffered the annoyance and pain of a rectal trouble will appreciate the excellent results which inevitably follow the first application of the Pyramid.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Allegan, Mich., and for sale by druggists everywhere.

The Evening Sentinel.

BY E. A. M MACKEY.

SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1895.

THE boom in the price of oil, which it is predicted will reach $2, is having the effect of opening up many oil fields in Indiana and Ohio.

THE authorities of Indianapolis have taken a determined stand against Sunday base ball and will permit no professional games in that city on that day during the present season.

MEREDITH H. KING, of Indiana, has resigned as a member of the Dawes commission to investigate the condition of the civilized tribes and will become chairman of the Ute commission.

As will be seen by our local columns, in the article giving an account of the convention of the Baptist Foreign Missionary society of the Northwest, the ladies of eight states will be in our city next week. Over 500 of them will be our guests, and they will be hospitably entertained.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND will pay a tax upon the income from his official salary. That section of the constitution which provides that the president's salary when fixed by law, shall not be diminished during his term of office, does not exempt his salary from the income tax, according to the president's own interpretation of the constitution, and Mr. Cleveland is credited, even by his political enemies, with being a first-class lawyer.

UNDER our tariff system any remedy for extraordinary high prices of meat in this country is practically denied the people. The tariff levies an absurd and mischievous duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem on all imports of cattle, hogs, sheep and other live animals, and also on all imports of fresh beef, mutton and pork and meats of every kind, prepared or preserved, and a still higher duty on poultry. As long as such unwise laws are left by the people on the statute books they can have no adequate protection against their artificial combinations of speculation or the scarcity of cattle in disastrous years of drought, operating to increase the cost of their meat supplies and deprive them of their necessary food.

The 42nd Easter Day.

The most distinctive of the Christian festivals is Easter. Unlike Christmas, which has become a great gift holiday, independent of its origin, Easter retains its essential Christian character. To its sacredness, nature adds the hopefulness of an early spring day, as if she, too, were glad, and a cheerful and cheering participant in the observance. In our temperate zone Easter, unless it falls unusually early, or the season be backward, finds the green things of earth sprouting. Here in Indiana the tips of the trees have already given evidence of their good intentions, and the grass will be quickened into full life before many days. The lily is the flower emblem of the day, and florists always have an abundance of them ready. It is few churches that are not brightened on Easter day by some expression of nature's awakening. The flowers join with the special music in announcing tidings as glad as the message of Christmas itself.

Easter Sunday is the greatest festival of the church. It was on this day that our Savior fulfilled His promise to His disciples of rising again three days after His death. Easter Sunday is then the anniversary of His resurrection. The gloom of the crucifixion and the tomb have gone and a joyous triumph over death has come, for Christ, the Savior, lives and the religion which He came to preach is proven to be from God. His resurrection is convincing to us that we, too, shall live and share with Him the joys of Heaven for ever more. As the stones were rolled from His sepulcher so, too, they will be rolled away from ours and we shall share with Him the joy which His triumph and death brought. It is this fact which makes Easter a glad day to all and no wonder that hymns are sung and praises ascend to the God who sent us such deliverance, such cheer, such comfort, such joy.

Easter Sunday is a day of great joy in the church. Her ministers announce to the Christian people the glad tidings of the resurrection. Her altars are made beautiful with flowers and brilliant lights. All that is attractive in music is appealed to to make the day more solemn. Hymns of thanksgiving ascend to Heaven as sweet incense: "Christ is really risen; this is the day which the Lord has made; let us be glad and rejoice therein. Let Israel now say that His is good, that His mercy endureth forever. The Good Shepherd has risen, who has given His life for His sheep, who ransomed to die for His flock."

Proof against all assaults is the reputation of Dr Price's Baking Powder. Its rivals are routed every time by its superior merits.

How Does She Know?

Helen Keller is the daughter of an editor in Tuscumbia, Ala. Until the age of 8 she saw and heard like other babies. Then an attack of brain disorder deprived her at one full swoop of sight and hearing. The poor girl was thus doubly barred off from the world.

Yet this remarkable child, now 14 years old can talk, write and do most of the things that other children with perfect senses can. Do all can pass, if she were taken to an opera she would enjoy the music with delight as keen as that of any one there. She is an intense lover of music. She knows when any of her family are approaching or whether one coming near her is a stranger. She places one finger across the lips of a person speaking to her, another upon his throat, and thus she understands what is said and answers back as intelligently as if she heard every word. If a dozen gloves belonging to as many different persons were handed to her, she could identify the owner of each and return it to him. This she does by the sense of smell.

The five senses have been resolved by some philosophers into one grand general sense that embraces them all. May it not be that this girl, deprived of the particular powers that would enable her to communicate with the world, has developed the general sense which resolves sight, sound and touch all into one? The theory of vibrations is now put forward to explain many things. Perhaps the vibrations from music touch her brain and body and are thence wafted to the grand inner sense, and thus she perceives the music without hearing it. It is the touch of its vibrations that affords her delight. Perhaps, like animals in the natural state, she perceives by the smell those known to her.

A Poet's Prediction.

In more than one instance the great German poet Goethe seemed to possess an intuition which led him to see far into the future. He foretold the building of the Nicaragua canal or some other canal across the isthmus by the United States. In 1827 he said:

It may be foreseen that along the whole coast of the Pacific ocean, where nature has already formed the most capacious and secure harbors, important commercial towns will gradually arise for the furtherance of great interests between Asia and the East Indies and the United States. In such a canal we should not only be desirable, but almost necessary, that a more rapid and immediate should be maintained between the eastern and the western shores of North America, both by merchant ships and men of war, than has hitherto been possible with the tedious, disagreeable and expensive voyage around Cape Horn.

It is absolutely indispensable for the United States to effect a passage from the Mexican gulf to the Pacific ocean, and I am certain that they will do it. Would that I might live to see it, but I shall not. I should like to see another thing—the junction of the Danube and the Rhine. But that undertaking is so gigantic that I have doubts of its completion, particularly when I consider our German resources. And, thirdly and lastly, I should wish to see England in possession of a canal through the isthmus of Suez. Would I could live to see those three great works! It should be worth the trouble to last some 60 years more for the purpose.

On the whole, the government makes a good bargain when it pays an annual mail subsidy to the four American lines on condition that they hold themselves in readiness to be used as naval cruisers if they are needed at any time. In a trial of speed one or more of the four would be faster than the swiftest of our regular government cruisers. The Columbia and Minneapolis, the best cruisers of the navy, each cost over $3,000,000 without the armament. The United States first paid for building them and must pay constantly the expenses of running them. The ocean steamers that are liable to be pressed into naval service if war should break out were built by a private corporation and pay their own expenses and make money for their owners besides, the government paying merely the annual subvention, a small sum in comparison with the expenses of operating any of those huge lines. The government would be well off if it had half a dozen more such cruisers.

Two model tenement houses designed by the two girl architects of New York, Mary Gannon and Alice Hand, is believed to furnish the best system of tenement house construction yet hit on. In their plans the meanest business is done away. There will be a bathroom on every floor, to which the inmates of the houses can go at any time and get a wash and a shower bath. When people begin to take regular baths, they will not be content very long to live in poverty and dirt and be known as the Card parties will be very popular for the post-lenten season, it is said. Of course, there is not much variety to be obtained in the arrangements for these "small and early" affairs, but a little thought and imagination may help to add new features, making pleasant subjects of conversation which will interest one guests. For instance, for the tally, instead of cards, one can use flowers or tiny bells, hanging, each one, from a bit of ribbon, and, as the guests receive one for each game won, he or she catches the ribbon with a fancy pin provided for the purpose. One of the prettiest designs in tally cards seen in a long time is one decorated in the the fashionable Louise Quinze style, and by the little hearts scattered over it from the hand of a tiny cupid is made clear the fact that it is intended for a hearts party.

THE LOST BARONET.

NORTHEDGE IS HEIR TO MILLIONS, BUT HAS DISAPPEARED.

He Was a Chicago Painter, and After Proving His Claim in England Sailed For New York, Where He Vanished From Sight—Foul Play Feared.

Search is being made in Chicago by agents of English lawyers for Sir George W. Northedge, Bart., of Somersetshire, England, and the possession of a fortune of something more than $2,000,000, who has mysteriously disappeared and in is feared has met with foul play.

Three years ago Sir George was a painter and contractor in a small way in this city and lived at 3520 State street. At that time he was observed by a firm of English lawyers who had for ten years been searching for the heirs to the vast property which was awaiting claimants in the English chancery court. Today they are working as industriously to find their gifted client as they did three years ago. Every contrary. He sailed from Liverpool about a year ago and landed safely in New York, since when nothing has been heard of him, and no drafts have been made upon his London bankers. For this reason his lawyers fear he has been murdered. They say this theory seems not improbable to them, as Northedge made many enemies on account of the attentions he was accustomed to press upon women He was unmarried, or at least was thought to have been, but it is said had been involved in many intrigues. When publicity was given to the fact that he had become possessed of the title and estates of more than $2,000,000 and was still single he received hundreds of letters from women throughout the country offering their hands and hearts in marriage. In one week more than 1,000 letters came to him, and some of these he answered.

It was only three years ago that Sir George came into his property. Feb. 4, 1892, he was at work painting a building when J. H. Gilchrist, Q. C., of Toronto found him and told him he need work for a living no longer, as he was heir to a landed estate in Somersetshire, to a baronetcy dating to days prior to William the Conqueror and to $1,956,753 in ready money.

Northedge was born March 4, 1844, in Montreal, his father being William Northedge. Both he and his father served in the civil war, he serving in the First battalion of the Connecticut cavalry, enlisting Oct. 26, 1861, and serving until he was severely wounded in the battle of Fairmount, Pa.

Northedge had but little money, and the attorneys advanced him enough to carry on his work. In this he was facilitated by the fact that he had received a bequest of £3,000 in 1872 from relatives in Montreal.

Having secured the legal proofs required by the lawyers, Northedge returned to this city and stopped at the Auditorium while he left his lawyers to push his claim. It was at this time that he received word of a second bequest to which he was heir. This amounted to nearly $250,000 and was left by Robert Sheppard of Bath, England, who was a brother of Northedge's grandmother, who was married in Montreal in 1816.

Curiously interwoven with the search for Northedge is the effort being made to find Josie Campana, who is being sought for by the same people. Miss Campana was a close friend of Northedge during his stay in this city, and though she never made such a claim it has been said will be her friends that she was legally Mrs. Northedge. However this may be, Northedge, after coming into his property, gave her a note for $5,000. This note has never been presented for payment. For some time after Northedge left this city Miss Campana was known to be here and at times occupied rooms with the lawyers. Recently she, too, has disappeared, and no trace of her can be found. Miss Campana came to this city from a small town in Michigan. Attracted by the reward offered, several men have already turned up who claim to be Northedge.—Chicago Tribune.

WOMEN IN THE SPRING.

They Need Nothing So Much as Paine's Celery Compound.

In the spring women need Paine's celery compound.

The average American woman, says a well known writer, wears herself out twenty years before her time. She begins the wearing out process as a child, staying up at night until the whole family retires; and keeps it up as a growing girl, staying awake until, 10 or 11 o'clock, when she should be asleep by 9; and as a woman she has so many things to do and to keep up with that she positively hasn't a minute to rest.

By and by her cheeks grow thin and haggard, languor takes the place of her old-time high spirits; she has a generally worn-out air; her nerves are gnawed by pain, and sleeplessness makes fearful inroads upon her health.

Her physician tells her simply that her nervous system is exhausted, and that help must come by feeding the brain and entire nervous tract, richly, rapidly and completely. It is the experience of the most careful medical men in this country that nothing proves so uniformly successful as Paine's celery compound in cases of brain weakness, nervous inability, failure of vital force, dyspepsia, sleeplessness, and for restoring health and vigor to the brain and body when exhausted by overwork or dissipation.

Every such weary, nervous, thin-blooded person should take Paine's celery compound. It makes such people well.

Paine's celery compound improves the general health by making new, ruddy blood and refreshing the nerves.

It reanimates the languid body and vitalizes the important organs so that they work in harmony with each other.

The accomplished editor of the Oakland, Ill., Ledger, a portrait of whose wife is given above, says in his own paper, editorially:

"Our leading druggist, Dr. W. G. Gregory, informs us that his sales of Paine's Celery compound have been wonderful; in fact, he states that he has in six months sold more celery compound than all other medicines combined. There has been a constant demand for it.

"One of the noticeable cures that this medicine has made is the case of Mr. Phil Clinard, who last spring was republican candidate for county treasurer. Mr. Clinard's nerves were all unstrung; he had no appetite and was all run down. He commenced using Paine's Celery compound, and today there is not a more well and vigorous citizen in this whole community than Mr. Clinard. Another case that comes closer is that of the wife of the editor of the Ledger. Every one in Oakland knows that Mrs. Yeargin was confined to her bed for three whole months with neuralgia. At times her pains were awful, so much so that her hands would clinch and it took the united strength of two persons to straighten out her fingers. Dr. Garvey, the family physician, treated her for months, but all he could do was to alleviate the pain, not effecting a cure. Along last winter she commenced using Paine's Celery compound.

"She commenced to gain in flesh at once. Her pain all went away, her vitality increased weekly, and today there is not a more healthy woman in town than she. Her neighbors all marvel at her complete recovery, and ask her the cause, and she has no hesitancy in saying that it is all due to Paine's Celery compound This is given voluntarily in the hopes that others who are afflicted may be profited by using this great medicine, which today is without a peer in the land."

Scotch Scones.

One quart of flour, 1 teaspoonful sugar, 4 teaspoonful salt, 2 teaspoonfuls Royal Baking Powder, 1 large tablespoonful lard, 2 eggs, nearly 1 pint milk. Sift together flour, sugar, salt and powder; rub in lard cold; add beaten eggs and milk; mix into dough smooth and just consistent enough to handle. Flour the board, turn out dough, give it one or two quick kneadings to complete its smoothness, roll it out with rolling pin to 1 inch in thickness, cut with sharp knife into squares larger than soda crackers, fold each in half to form three cornered pieces. Bake on hot griddle 5 or 10 minutes; brown on both sides.

Apple Griddle Cakes.

Proceed as directed for Squash or Pumpkin Griddle Cakes, excepting this particular: Apples are usually thinner than the squash, consequently will not need so much milk.

Banana Fritters.

Five bananas, stripped of skin and sliced in half lengthwise, common batter. Proceed as directed for Apple Fritters.

Custard Fritters.

One-half pint milk, 5 eggs, 1 cupful sugar, 1 gill cream, common batter. Heat milk, cream, sugar and eggs together, strain, put into small bowl, set in saucepan with boiling water to reach half way up the sides of bowl, steam very gently, until set, about 20 minutes; place on ice until cold, cut into pieces about 1½ inches long by 1 square; dip into common batter and, fry in plenty of hot lard, a deep fawn color; serve sprinkled with sugar.

John Fiske an Infant Prodigy.

Professor John Fiske is an able man in several branches of learning. It is interesting to know that, according to a recent biographical sketch of him, he was the prize infant prodigy in America in the days of modern times. At 7 he was reading Latin authors, at 8 he had read all of Shakespeare and a great deal of Milton, and at 9 he was deep in Greek. He seems indeed to have taken to Greek as a duck takes to water, for at 15 he had dipped into nearly all the extant classical authors and was reading Plato at night while attending to such accidental recreations as mastering trigonometry, analytical geometry, surveying, navigation, etc. Truly he was a portentous child.

THE BATTLE OF ST. LOUIS.

It Was Nine Against Black, but the Cadets Were the Victors.

"Attention! Forward, march!"

These were the words of Captain Brown of the Manual Training school, Company C, and instantly 60 pairs of heels ranged themselves in a straight line, and 59 nine casted, blue capped, white gloved boys, "dressing to the front," stepped briskly forward. Not one faltering cadet made a misstep, and everything went along smoothly. At that time the thought of possible woes did not disturb the serenity of the occasion, and it is doubtful whether or not the whole Choctaw army and a company of regulars could have scared the cadets to flight, but they had no sooner begun to cross over to the south side of Lucas place than a couple of coal drivers, without even so much as a vestige of blue or the sign of a weapon, appeared upon the scene, and as they were accustomed to proceed with their load they did not heed the passing soldiers, but ran their wagon straight through the ranks.

Not thus did the prospective warriors propose to be rudely interfered with, and regardless of their military discipline they broke ranks and pursued the offending coal men. One yesternoone boy climbed on the wagon, and had it not been for the passing of his alma he would probably have severely injured one of the men with a large lump of coal. Neither were the drivers to be "bluffed," for they also tried to ward off their pursuers by chunks of coal large enough to have built a comfortable fire. And so for a few moments the battle raged, coal fighting coal, blue against black. But it was only for a few moments. It did not take long for 60 large sized boys bent on mischief to rout two men, and the drivers were glad to make good their escape. The wagon was quickly taken in charge by the boys, and while a squad was appointed by the captain to watch it the company proceeded on its march as if nothing had happened. The men were pursued some distance, but the best sprinters in the company were unable to get near them.—St. Louis Republic.

Choice Seen Made.

"Can you get anything to eat on theses, papa?" anxiously inquired the little 4-year-old who was getting ready for her first long railway journey.

"Certainly, Pinx," replied her father. "There will be a dining car on the train."

"But we'll get awful hungry waiting for dinner. Won't there be any breakfast car?"

"You don't understand, dear. We shall get our breakfast in the dining car."

"What'll there be to eat?"

"Well, there will be a bill of fare that will have the names of ever so many kinds of food on it. You can have beefsteak, mutton chops and chicken, and baked potatoes, fried potatoes and boiled potatoes, hot cakes, oatmeal, hot biscuits, graham bread, rice or cooked fruits, coffee, tea or chocolate. Now, child, what do you think you will want for your choice?"

SEEING A BLUE LIGHT

MRS. GALLUP BREAKS THE PAINFUL NEWS TO HER HUSBAND.

The Light Is Seen by Mrs. Watkins, and It Means a Sudden Flight Upward Before Another Daybreak—Mr. Gallup Remains Calm and Unmoved.

(Copyright, 1895, by Charles J. Bevis.]

When Mr. Gallup brought out the tin lantern and lighted the tallow candle and started off down town to buy 70 feet of clothesline, a spool of shaving soap and two pounds of hemp navy nails, Mrs. Watkins had just entered the house to tell Mr. Gallup that she might possibly have to borrow two thirteens and a cup of sugar next day. Mr. Gallup took things easy, and did not return for an hour. He was greeted by the kitchen door, blew out his candle and hung up his lantern, and after warming his coat tails at the stove for three or four minutes he entered the sitting room and sat down. Mrs. Gallup was sewing on three pillow slips and looking over a pattern for a new basque, and Mrs. Watkins was copied by a middle aged man and three or four bundles. He was at the three or four passengers were standing up, but he got called to be fanned. He rested in his newspaper and paid no heed to the Gallups and got a bottle of ink. The candle he was supplied to, but he used the bait up on a bit of fat and it flared in the draft. By and by a very solemn and sedate looking girl in very prim clothes who had waited for all the proceedings with great interest said to one of the ladies present:

"Friend, I may call you a man of peace and gentleness, but although three hundred upon half that sent all my sympathy would be with thee."

The person addressed replied that he had a knee back and was not in condition for money, and this caused a pause and much perplexity, but finally the sewing was packed up and folded.

"Friend, the color of thy hair being red, it is naturally follows that thou hast grit. Sensible thou strive for half that went over there I know it is for thee to conquer."

The millennial maiden acknowledged to the color of the hair and the grit, but he exhibited a thumb on which he had had a blow for several weeks and declared his helplessness. Then she sent a third piece without a word and he was bowed a third addressed wife:

"Friend, my ways are ways of peace and gentleness, but a soothlet thou see fit to drive some stuff of that sort I would track thee with my counsel and hope for thy success."

The third man said that he had only one leg left and was no fighter, and for another quarter of an hour the suffering leg was permitted to enjoy himself undisturbed. Then the man of peace rose up, removed his overcoat, and attracting upon the spectrum of human selfishness he said:

"Friend, pardon me whilst I check thy bundles on the floor."

"You let them hardbesalone!" exclaimed the man as he straightened up.

They were not disturbed, however, not with no gentle hand, and as the owner attempted to get up the room of peace took him by the back of the neck and the shoulder and noted him again at the window and said:

"Friend, I trust thou with cumso me, but thou bought only half this cent."

The leg declared he would punch somebody's head, and tried like hell to get on his feet, but the meaner gentleman choked him and borrowed on him until he gasped for breath, and then quietly said:

"There will be no gathering of bands over Olde Ireland. Come here, friend, and take what belongs to thee."

One of the men returned and sat down, and the old man returned to his overcoat thing room. He had neither seen nor heard from Mrs. Gallup, but his suspicion what had happened. He found her in the big rocking chair, a towel tied tightly around her head and the camphor bottle in her hand. As he entered the room she looked up through her half closed eyes and moaned:

"Samuel, I was afraid you wouldn't get home in time to hear my dying words and kiss me for the last time on earth! Thank heaven, you have come! Samuel, kiss me farewell!"

Mr. Gallup looked up at the clock and saw that it was 20 minutes to 8. Then he went out into the kitchen, pulled off his boots by the aid of the bootjack and put on his slippers. As he entered the sitting room and sat down to his newspaper.

"Samuel," continued Mrs. Gallup, after several hearty sniffs at the camphor bottle, "do you know what Mrs. Watkins told me after you went out? She didn't mean to let it out, knowing how nervous I am, but she did it without thinking. Last night at midnight she thought she heard the cat in the pantry, and she got up to see. She looked out of the window in this direction, and she saw a blue light move from our barn to the hog pen, then to the smokehouse, then to the house and run along the roof and disappear. She was so overcome that she couldn't speak for five minutes, and when she got back into bed her feet didn't get warm for an hour. Samuel, do you know what that blue light means?"

Mr. Gallup was right there within five feet of her, and it was reasonable to believe that he heard her words, but he had nothing to say in reply.

"It means," said Mrs. Gallup as she wet the palm of her left hand with the camphor and held it to her nose, "that I shall never see another sunrise. That was a warning, Samuel. It was no angel flitting around to warn me that my time had come at last, and it was all arranged for Mrs. Watkins to see it and tell me. Yes, Samuel, you will soon be a widower, and I will be at rest. Are you sorry?"

Mr. Gallup was reading an item about a cucumber nine feet long grown in California, and while his face wore a smile it was doubtful whether he was thinking of Mrs. Gallup's prospective demise or the cucumber.

"I don't s'pose you are," she went on as she drew the towel a little tighter around her head. "You'll git a second wife in less'n a year, and that won't be no end to the way you and her will gad about. You'll go to spellin bees and picnics and temperance lectures, and if she wants a tablecloth costin 75 cents you'll shillin it when you'll break your neck to git it for her. It's like 13 years since you painted the kitchen floor, but I'll bet you don't live for your second wife within a week after you're married."

Mrs. Gallup put the camphor bottle on the table and unpinned the towel that she might use it to wipe her eyes and then began to weep. Mr. Gallup didn't know of any reason why she shouldn't weep if she wanted to, and about that time also he struck a very interesting item about a new catarrh snuff and proceeded to finish it.

"But I'm not complainin," said Mrs. Gallup after she had got the best of her emotions. "I'm a Fuller, and the Fullers would die before they would complain. I did want to live until I got the carpet kept grease 'nuff to make a full bar'l of soft soap, but if I'm called I'm not goin to hang back. If I need any soft soap in heaven, I s'pose it'll be furnished, and soon and your second wife has log bar soap down here or go without. Samuel, do you think you'll be lonesome the first night or two after I'm gone?"

Mrs. Gallup had another fit of weeping as she asked the question, and Mr. Gallup kicked off one of his slippers and scratched his heel and looked up at the clock and hunted over a whole page of his newspaper before he found another item to attract his attention.

"You may be," said Mrs. Gallup as she pulled at her nose with the towel, "but you kin gamble and see the hens comin the next day corn and eggs 'n a dozen. I don't expect you'll do any weepin, but for the looks of things you'd better look rather solemn and rub go to the trained log shoe which is to be held next week. All the neighbors will come in to condole with and when they speak about what a handsome wife I was, and how patient I bore affliction under all my sufferin's, you'd better purfuted to shed two tears away. You wouldn't really break down, but it'll look better to shed at least three tears. Samuel, when you see my shoes and dresses and stockin's around and know that I'm gone for good and won't never in turn a off —will"

Just then the clock struck 9. Mr. Gallup got up and proceeded to wind it, went out into the kitchen to see that the door was locked and everything all right, and as he returned to the sitting room he extracted the lamp into the family bedroom. Mrs. Gallup wearily rose up, took the towel in one hand and the camphor bottle in the other and followed him, with the remark:

"I guess I'll go to bed too. As long as I'm goin to expire I might as well do as comfortable as I kin, and it will save you little me out of the chair and strahin your back. I won't take up much room, and I'll perish as gently as possible, and if you wake up and find me gone you'll remember that I was a wife who tried to git through this world without making doctor bills or trouble."

WELL PAID EDITORS.

CHARLES A. DANA GETS A SALARY OF $50,000 A YEAR.

Other New York Journalists Receive Princely Salaries—Work of The Herald, Herald of The Sun and Mistakes of The Tribune.

[Special correspondence.]

NEW YORK, April 5.—Charles A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, is the world of those who ought to know what they are talking about as to be forbidden open, as the best paid journalist in America, if not in the world. It is said that he receives a salary of $50,000 a year. If this be true, he pays a handsome part of this out of his own pocket, as he is one of the large owners in The Sun corporation, although he does not own a controlling interest in the stock.

This great salary may possibly account for his often expressed objection to exchanging his desk for a post of honor in the public service. It will be remembered that on numerous occasions when Mr. Dana has been suggested as a candidate for the presidency he has always declined the proffered honor, saying that no post is more honorable or useful than the editorship of a great newspaper.

There are several other editors in New York who receive salaries large enough to make office holding unattractive. Within the past fortnight I have made a careful attempt to obtain for publication the salaries paid to the leading journalists of this city. I give the figures as they were given to me. The reader may choose between the highest and the lowest figures as his judgment dictates. All that I can say is that I have thrown out all estimates which seemed to be at variance with the truth.

Mr. Carvalho's Career.

Probably next to Mr. Dana the best paid journalist in New York is Mr. S. S. Carvalho of The World. Thirteen years ago Mr. Carvalho was a reporter on the staff of The Sun. He was one of the most reliable reporters in the city, conscientious, industrious and persevering. He was a good but not brilliant writer, but he seldom was "left" in securing news. His was a rather cynical turn of thought, but absolutely no sense of humor.

Perhaps it is because Mr. Carvalho sees only the serious side of life that he is Mr. Pulitzer's personal representative in the great World establishment and receives a salary which is estimated variously at $10,000 to $20,000 a year. I gave credit to the larger amount.

He went with Mr. Pulitzer as the first city editor of The Evening World eight years ago. Later on he became managing editor of that very prosperous paper, and then he was transferred to the parent plant as general manager of the finances. His power is almost absolute, and he is said to be lower in the corner than any other man in his employ. When one considers that it costs about $10,000 a day to publish The World and Mr. Carvalho can spend or save $10,000 in a month without making any appreciable difference in the paper to the reader, a salary of $20,000 does not seem to be exorbitant, especially as The World is credited with making a profit of nearly $1,000,000 a year.

Mr. Pulitzer's Favorites.

I am told that Farnsley, the managing editor of The World, gets but $7,-800. These figures would be ridiculously small if it were not for the fact that Pulitzer is notoriously liberal. The World since the days of Colonel Cockerill and Ballard Smith is more or less of a nautical position and is rarely held long by any occupant.

In The World office there are always two or three men who are "men" to Mr. Pulitzer. They take turns in spending a short time with the owner of the paper at his country place in Jersey or on his hotel in Paris, and they are for the time managing editors in all but name. It is commonly reported that Arthur Brisbane receives $150 a week from The World. He is supposed to be nearest of all to Mr. Pulitzer, except Mr. Carvalho. He began his work on The Sun as a reporter in 1881 and soon became its city reporter. In the fall of 1882 he went to Europe and began The Sun's cable service there. Soon after Amos J. Cummings started The Evening Sun he became its managing editor. Then, it is said, he quarreled with Publisher Laffan and left The Sun's service to take editorial charge of The Sunday World. He has been with Mr. Pulitzer ever since, most of the time in Europe.

Most New York newspaper writers are frequent and special writers according to the amount of matter that they write. The pay varies from $1 to $4 a column, with special prices for special pieces of work. Sometimes a newspaper will pay $50 or even $100 for an especially meritorious piece of work. The reader may choose between the highest and the lowest figures as his judgment dictates. All that I can say is that I have thrown out all estimates which seemed to be at variances

THE GATES OF HEAVEN.

There is a World Somewhere Where There is No Darkness.

Twelve Gates Through Which You Can Pass to Glory If Clear Words About Heavenly and Perishable Are Spoken by You

By Dr. Talmage, of Chicago, U.S.

Rev. Dr. Talmage took for his subject to-day: The Gates of Heaven, the text being Revelation xxi., 21: "And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl."

Our subject speaks of a great metropolis, the existence of which many have doubted. Standing on the mind and looking off upon the harbor and seeing the merchantmen coming on the bay, the flags of foreign nations streaming from the topgallants, you immediately make up your mind that those vessels came from foreign ports, and you say: "That is from Hamburg, and that is from Marseilles, and that is from Southampton, and that is from Havana," and your supposition is accurate. But from the city of which I am now speaking no wealth-beaten merchantmen or frigates with scarred sideboard have ever come. There has been a vast outgrowth into that city, but no outgrowing from it, so far as our natural vision can discern.

"There is no such city," says the undevout astronomer, "I have stood in high towers with a mighty telescope and have swept the heavens, and I have seen spots on the sun and caverns in the moon, but no human eye, with vision on my vision, no palaces, no temples, no shining streets, no massive wall. There is no such city." Even very good people tell me that Heaven is not a material organism, but a grand spiritual fact, and that the Bible descriptions of it are in all cases to be taken figuratively. I bring in reply to this what Christ said, and he ought to know, "I go to prepare"—not a theory, not a principle, not a sentiment, but "I go to prepare a place for you." The resurrected body implies this. If my foot is to be reformed from the dust, it must have something to stand on. If my hand is to be reconstructed, it must have something to handle. If my eye, having gone out in death, is to be rekindled, I must have something to gaze on. Your adverse theory seems to imply that the resurrected body is to be hung on nothingness to walk in sky, or to float amid the intangibles. You may say if there be material organisms then a soul in Heaven will be cramped and hindered in its enjoyments, but I answer, Did not Adam and Eve have plenty of room in the garden of Eden? Although the whole earth would have described the chosen heritance of that place, they had ample room. And do you not suppose that God, in the immensities, can build a place large enough to give the whole race room, even though there be material organisms?

Herschel looked into the heavens. As a Swiss guide puts his Alpine stock between the glaciers and crosses over from crag to crag, so Herschel planted his telescope between the worlds and glided from star to star until he could announce to us that we dwell in a part of the universe that is sparsely sown with worlds, and he peers out into immensity until he finds a region no larger than our solar system in which there are 50,000 worlds moving. And Prof. Long says that by a philosophic reasoning there must be somewhere a world where there is no darkness, but unceasing sunshine, so that I do not know but that it is simple because we have no telescope powerful enough that we can not see into the land where there is no darkness at all and catch a glimpse of the burnished pinnacles. As a conquering army marching on to take a city comes at nightfall to the crest of a mountain from which, in the midst of the landscape, they see the castles they are to capture, and rein in their war chargers, and halt to take a good look before they pitch their tents for the night, and as they go marching on to on this mountain top of prospect, I command this regiment of God to rein in their thoughts and halt, and before they pitch their tents for the night take one good, long look at the gates of the great city. "On the east three gates, on the north three gates, and on the west three gates."

In the first place I want you to examine the architecture of those gates. Proprietors of large estates are very apt to have an ornamental gateway. Sometimes they spring an arch of masonry, the posts of the gate studded with lions in stationary; the bronze gate a representation of interlwining foliage, bird haunted, until the hand of architectural genius drops exhausted, all its life frozen into the stone. Gates of wood and iron and stone guarded nearly all the old cities. We read in Josephus about their gateways inscriptions from the Koran of the Mohammedan. There have been a great many fine gateways, but Christ sets his hand to the work, and for the upper city sweung a gate such as no eye ever gazed on, untouched of inspiration in all the hall of his own works for artistic and its wonderful tenacities stories of past suffering and of gladness to come. There is no wood or stone or bronze in that gate, but from top to base and from side to side it is all pearl. Not one piece picked up from Cevlon banks, and another piece from the Persian gulf, and another from the island of Margarette, but one solid pearl picked up from the beach of everlasting light by Heavenly hands and linished and swung amid the shouting of angels. The glories of alabaster vase and purpyry pillar are left before the gateway. It puts out the spark of feldspar and diamond. You know how one little precious stone on your finger will flash under the gaslight. But, oh, the brightness when the great gate of Heaven swings, struck through and dripping with the light of eternal noonday!

John—Dear pain! 12,000 cubits for one pearl. The government of Portugal boasted of having a pearl larger than a pea. Cleopatra and Philip II. dazzled the world's vision with precious stones. But gather all the jewelries and lift them, and to add to them all the wealth of the pearl fisheries and set them in the panel of one door, and it, does not equal this magnificent gateway. An Almighty hand hewed this, among this polished this. Against this gate Satan on the one side dash all the splendors of earthly beauty. Against the gate, on the other side, beat the surges of eternal glory. On the gate, the gate! It strikes an infinite charm through every one that passes it. One step this side of the gate and we are paupers, one step the other side of the gate, and we are kings. The pilgrim of earth coming through seas in the one hand pearl all his earthly tears in exchange for the pearl gate of heaven, for on that gate smile all the

Oh, Heaven is not a rich place! Heaven is not a worthless place! Heaven stands a living witness from twelve gates and they were twelve pearls.

In the second place, I want you to notice the location of these gates. Six several parties and one's enough to have more capacity than that. But the others are ordinary folk, from assorted of those nationalities to Heaven and many from the three points, the north, the east and the south, while one has a west, to be exact. But a small number from the west, and how few, as compared with the whole number of the redeemed! Let us see if we can not find the reason of that fact. Why is it that so few from the west get into Heaven? Is it because the people of the west are worse than those of the east? Is it because the influences of the west are worse than those of the east? Is it because the darkness of the west is greater than the darkness of the east? Is it because the facilities for getting to Heaven are greater in the east than in the west? Is it because the Bible was first given to the east? Is it because the Sabbath was first kept in the east? Is it because the churches of the east are more numerous than those of the west? EASTER LILIES.

In purple and crimson glory
The Easter sunlight poured
A flood through the stained windows
In the temple of our Lord.
He was there—we knew Him by that glow
And when the lilies wafted perfume,
Like incense from the altar,
We knew it was His breath.

With every fragrant chalice
A cup of life to the lowly was filled,
In falling there unheeded
And rising unrebuked.
Earth's every corner received
Its gift of holiness and love,
Its whole atmosphere was sanctified
By sacrificial lilies.

With prayers from our hearts uprising,
Which mingled and seemed to reach
Through the air to the earth and heaven,
So blending them each with each,
That may soul could feel the presence,
The mystic and the tender eyes
Of one who gathers the lilies
In gardens of paradise.

AN EASTER FLOWER.

BY BENJAMIN SWEETSER.

[Copyright, 1886, by Associated Press Association.]

Just out of the city there is a long winding road which takes you over the low hills to the sands on the beach.

A brackish stream of tide water crosses the road, which is spanned by a stone bridge. No one now living was born when this bridge was built. It is cracked with age, stained and moss covered, and in the crevices grass, flowers and ting shrubs grow. On some of the stones a wandering mid-century has penned pious praising God and inviting upon the wicked to repent before it is too late. Over the widest crevice this is painted: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Under this is a little grotto some blue violets had grown, snugly sheltered from the sun and storms.

It was late in May or early in June when the cards over the rankish stone bridge on her way to the beach. She had never been to the country before. She had been in the park once, but that was when she was a very small child, and she had forgotten almost how it looked.

Under the shades of the old bridge the children of the Fresh Air fund stopped for luncheon, and she and the other little girls took off their shoes and stockings and paddled in the creek. After the sandwiches and apples, doughnuts and cakes, she found the violets and dug them out. She had never seen anything so beautiful before. They were prettier than all the Easter flowers in the most stylish shop windows, and they smelled sweeter. Besides that, she herself had found them, and they were hers own.

All afternoon, while the other children played in the sands, she played with her violets, picking the soft black earth from their roots to see how small and pink they were, and opening and closing the half blown buds to see the fresh blue lid under the green shells. If some older girl who knew all about the country and wild flowers, this being her second summer in the Fund, if this experienced girl had not told her that violets cannot stand such proving treatment, they never would have lived to reach the town.

It is not far from down Rye way at the stone bridge to down Battery way at the sea wall. Two hours. That is all if you take a fast team, and violets will live a long time when you bury their roots in moist red earth and let the blossoms alone. Therefore, when she reached her home in Battle Court, the flowers were as almost fresh and sweet as they were in their grotto on the bridge.

A cracked stone pitcher became their new home, and on pleasant days they stood outside on the kitchen window sill and looked down on the stone flagged courtyard. Long before midsummer came they had been more of life than they and all the other violets along the Rye road could ever have dreamed of, giving violets imaginations equal even to their fragrance.

They saw Blind Flaherty, the beggar man, beg his lame leg over by the sink until the police came in, and after that in an ambulance. One awful afternoon they saw the wife of Mossy Brown, the pawnbroker, jump from the fifth story window of her room and fall on the grass right in a sprawling heap—white, limp and red—and the violets could not even shut their eyes to be spared.

They saw Sally Hickey, Mr. Rivers, him that drives the fish cart, meet Sally just once in the same moonlight the night before they were all married. They saw Mr. Rivers hold the hand that rocked many cradles, kissed and caressed it, and then the court while the children cried for its absence. Three days later, although the country road, and they were left for weeks and weeks there. It is a great mistake to think that a child forgets their country home when they are planted in town.

Before this great treat is over I will tell you how quickly it will recur at the whiff of the fresh violets.

In strange weather there is a storm inside the room, and when the one other great cold they stood on a shelf facing the window inside the store, where it was always open.

That little wax face violets lived from early in May or late in June until the winter had gone and Easter had almost come.

* * * * * * *

Up town there is a great church. It is rich and beautiful. The sunlight that streams through the stained windows is purple, blue and golden, and sometimes the figure of a saint wondrously colored is cast across the chancel floor.

The little girl who picked the violets used to go to this great church, and she was welcomed here because it is a great church.

Good Friday, with its seven services, had passed, and the solemn trappings of gloom were being taken away to make places for the Easter flowers. There were lilies, roses, orchids, violets, palms and flowering shrubs. There were great wreaths of green hung from the pulpit, and the baptismal font was all white and pink. Rare and common, hothouse and wild flowers were massed together. They were all love offerings, and this is the reason that a simple bunch of blue wild violets found a place in one corner of the altar almost hidden by a splendid display of roses. Only one person saw them, except the young women of the Altar guild, who, laboring for love, arrange the flowers for Easter and other feast days.

She sat in one of the front pews, and she was dressed in plain black, very plain and common black, such as other washerwomen wear when their children die. She saw the violets, and her one wish was that the little girl who had brought them to town from the old stone bridge and had cared for them all year for this very Easter altar were only alive to see them too."

It was a great congregation befitting a great church and a still greater feast day. From the doors to the chancel rail every pew was filled, and there were chairs in the aisles. These were filled, too, and back of them all men and women stood. The front pews in this church are given up on Easter day to the poor of the parish. The children from the orphanage and the cared and homeless women from the Aged One's home filled several rows on the right, and on the left were the men and women and children who on ordinary Sundays sit for hours under the gallery over the main portals. They teach that God's Son rose from the dead on Easter day for rich and poor alike in the great church.

HE PRESSED THEM TO HIS LIPS

The chimes in the belfry had finished their song, the big bell had given the last of its three taps, and the tuborgan let in the choristers had taken his place from it.

"Onward, Christian Soldiers," was the hymn, and the great congregation outside heard it sung behind closed doors. Then came the "Amen," louder than the orchestra, richer and fuller.

The choristers doors opened, and the choristers, robed in white and black, marched out. The great organ in the chancel caught up the air and led the singers. First came the treble, sweet and high. Then the altos, they came next, and made a second in the harmony. After men came the tenors, and last of all the basses. Then the harmony was complete:

Onward, Christian soldiers, marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus going before.

That is the refrain. That is what the whole choir sings as they faced each other in the opposite side of the chancel, and the bright strains rang through the church like the chant of a band marching at the head of an army into land.

After the service came the recessional. The preacher was an old man, with white, silky hair. Two deacons took him by each arm on a side, and, with the choristers in front, one apart from the other. That is the way he, the white haired old priest, has been led for many years. He had come to be to us as a father. He had come to be to the people of this church like the old priest of Israel, and he was the only one who knew that this was probably to be his last Easter day. When death comes to you, will you be unprepared? Shall the blood of him who died that we might live always be shed in vain? Is there no atonement? This is how he—

Even the choir listened to this. The bows stopped fidgeting, and the men sat very still. The women in black looked at the bunch of violets on the altar, and tears fell upon their glasses.

That was what he said, although he used many words then I have done and took a longer time to say it, and after he left the pulpit and passed the usual and administers back of the chancel rail there were more wet eyes than the weather common in the city of churches, and there were many promises made for the coming year that the makers will not live to keep up.

* * * * * * *

Early Easter Monday the ladies of the Altar guild were again at work. The flowers which had been kept for the first Sunday were carefully laid away. The chancel rails were thronged with carrying men and women waiting to carry them home. The other flowers—the cut stalks from the florists, the flowers from the ladies—and the little in pots of wild violets—were taken away in a wagon load total. The sick have their Easter on Monday.

It was in a long white footed ward. Near the middle of it an iron cot by a window. This was Jim's cot. Jim was a sailor lad before a street car had cut off one of his feet. He knew that he had to stay in the Fresh Air fund, and he knew the country was in bloom, that the road was dusty, and he was desirous of until he knew he was to be sent home.

He carried about his long ward three of the flowers from the Easter altar rails, violets, lilies and still more roses. Their fragrance made the air heavy, and he knew by instinct his face showed the sunshine.

After all had been distributed a nurse brought to him a spray of wild violets. There were still four was left. He took them in his hands and pressed them to his face. Then he said some thing about the country, or how that the nurse said he'd earn it and fell asleep.

A Famous Egg Dance.

There is a pretty account of the marriage of Marguerite of Austria with Philibert, the handsome duke of Savoy. It is called "Marriage aux oeufs." She had come to the castle of Brou, in the charming district of Bresse, lying on the western slopes of the Alps. Here the rich peasants kept open house, and Philibert, who was hunting in the neighborhood, came to pay his court to her.

It was Easter Monday, and high and low danced together on the green.

A hundred eggs were scattered in a level space, covered with sand, and a lad and lass, holding each other by the hand, came forward to execute a dance of the country. According to the ancient custom, if they succeeded in finishing the brawl without breaking a single egg they became affianced.

Then Philibert, radiant with youth and happiness, appeared upon the scene. He knelt his knee before the noble chatelaine and besought her hospitality. He proposed to her to try the egg fortune. She accepted. Their grace and beauty charmed the onlookers, and they succeeded, without a single crush, in threading the perilous maze.

"Savoy and Austria!" shouted the crowd. And she said, "Let us adopt the custom of Bresse."

They were married and enjoyed a four years of exquisite happiness. Then the beloved husband died. Marguerite survived him long, but never forgot him.

CURIOUS RUSSIAN OBSERVANCES.

Easter is the Muscovite Cleaning Day. Making the Holy Chrism Oil.

Easter is the greatest ecclesiastical religious festival of Russia. Holy week ushers in a season of solemn fasting and supplication. The circles are closed and street musicians forbidden to ply their trade. Easter is the time for giving presents, just as Christmas is with us, and every one puts on a new suit of clothes on Easter morning. The "prospect" fever only rages during the latter half of the week, for on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of Holy week all commerce is suspended.

Another great feature of Russian Eastertide is the bonfire. The flames of the pyre and combustibles are turned into ashes in a single night, and preparations for this take place on the 2-4 preceding Holy week. Immediately over the hearth where the ashes will be found are placed the sacred images of the household, and more especially the holy chrism oil. This oil is made from the balsam of the fir tree, and is used for baptismal purposes throughout the year. The making of the chrism oil is a ceremony performed annually either at Moscow or Kiev. Bad Egg's Revenge.

How to Etch Eggs.

There are many ways of coloring and ornamenting Easter eggs. A simple way is to sew them up in highly colored prints before boiling. There is one way to engrave egg-shells. Take an egg that has been blown and stop up the ends with wax. Then write or draw any design desired with varnish or tallow. Then drop the egg into a weak acid like vinegar. In a little while the acid will decompose the lime in the shell, except where the lines are marked by the varnish or tallow, and the latter will stand out in bold relief.

When Easter comes, the church bells loudly ring out notes of joy and thanks.
When Easter comes, the busy Cupid starts his round of calming pranks.

EASTER ETCHINGS.

A Few Inner Leaves From a Notebook of Life.

What a bonnet it was! The very handbox that it came in seemed to appreciate the value and magnificence it contained—such a substantial, well varnished, responsible handbox. Up the steps the messenger carried it and rang the bell. Her husband felt a chill come such as that we experience when, according to the old gossip, somebody walks over our future grave.

It was Easter, and if one can't have a new bonnet after the Lenten deprivations and of structure, when is one entitled to one anyway?

Mrs. Frontpaw tried it on in the parlor and said her husband was a duck. Never was there a husband so good and kind and with such taste.

The doorbell rang again. Another messenger boy came up.

"This is Mrs. Frontpaw's bonnet," said the messenger. "The other one was left by mistake. It should have gone to Mrs. Slyly, next door."

With a Mandeed face she gave back the bonnet and looked at her own. Bird for bird, feather for feather, flower for flower—it was the same as the other.

That is why Mrs. Frontpaw was not in church on Easter and why Frontpaw has been taking supper down town and looks like a man upon whom great woe is fallen.

How could he tell? The milliner merely showed him a pretty neatness, and he ordered one made up like it.

But that's like a man.

"The Resurrection of the Rose in Their Powers."

A little pot of mignonette stood in the window of a crowded tenement. A poor woman bent over it and tenderly plucked a withered leaf from its fresh green crown. The sun shone gayly on the blue bay, and the woman stood watching the little glint of dancing water from inside between the houses.

She put a tiny sprig of the faded mignonette in her faded dress and took down her shabby bonnet. Then she walked out for a few rods to get a good breath of fresh air. She passed a church door standing open and heard a burst of music. So she wandered timidly in and sat humbly down in a quiet corner.

The altar was fair with flowers. The woman drew a deep breath of delight when she saw the lilies.

A man took hold of her arm. "You're in some one's pew," he said roughly.

The woman rose nervously. "I'm sorry," she stammered. "Where can the free seats be?"

"There ain't no free seats in this church," she red the man.

The woman trembled. She put her thin hands up to the bunch of mignonette. The sacrament was administering the words with brushed passed through the swinging doors.

"She was despis ed rejected, a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief."

THE HOBO'S SONG OF SPRING.

When the Winter's chilly fetters
Melt away from icy streams,
When the meadows know we are changing,
Into richer golden gleams,
When the hillside and the valley
Lose their drifting snowy load
You can bet your collar button
That the Hobo hits the road.

Home want—not the darting swallows
From the low'ring to the sky,
When you mention thyme as allows
You are surely watching me
When the sun ascends the heavens
Hurling back the frost and storm,
Why, it hits me where I'm living
As I look for "something warm."

I'm the daffodil of April,
When the snowdrifts disappear,
I'm the crocus of the Springtime
Telling you that Summer's near,
I'm the monkey-flowered primrose,
I'm the modest violet,
In the margin of the woodland
You will find me soon, you bet.

I'm an oriental blossom
Ornamental rich,
And I have no fear of insects
Nor of any kind of grub;
You can spray me with the dewdrops
Wash me nearly with the rain,
Water straight is always welcome
Only soap will give me pain.

Don't you watch for signs of robins
Or of bluebirds coming back,
Never mind the weather bureau
Nor consult the almanac,
Would you know to set out cabbage
Or the early rose to sow?
Just you watch the distant hilltops
When the Hobo hits the road.

In reply to a complaint against the "excessive" freight rates of railways the Bluffton News says: "Farmers and others who are disposed to complain of high rates of railroad freights should remember that there are citizens of Bluffton who remember very well when forty-five cents per hundred weight was the regular rate for all kinds of grain from Fort Wayne to the seaboard, with 10 to 12½ cents additional from Bluffton to that city. The present rate is from this city to New York 12 to 15 cents per hundred weight. In order to form a correct conclusion as to the benefit of railroads we only have to recall the difference between the rates forty years ago and now."

SAFE PLACE ON A TRAIN.

The question of "Where is the safest place on a train?" is very frequently asked. General Manager Bradbury, of the Lake Erie and Western, when interrogated on the subject, said. "That is a hard question to answer, for it is like asking where is the best place for a bird to fall. The question of safety depends, in a measure, on the length of a train. A train made up of a smoker and a day coach could have no particularly safe spots, and the passenger would be in as much danger in the event of a collision in one car as in the other. On long trains I think that if there is any difference there is more safety in a car or two from the rear of a train. However, I generally ride in the rear car. Men have become old and gray as conductors and engineers, and yet young men are killed as often as any other."

"What's the matter with the griddle cakes?" "Why, I forgot to use Dr. Price's Baking Powder."

CHICAGO TELEPHONES.

Rates Will be Reduced in That City.

Chicago, April 13.—The Chicago Telephone company inside of ten days will have in operation a schedule of rates. It is announced, as low as $3 a month available, it is estimated, to at least twenty-five per cent. of the total number of its present patrons. The cut is to be accomplished by the creation of what are called "Party circuits," a new device. General Manager Hibbard says the rates will be on a sliding scale. Where there are two instruments on the circuit the rent will be $75 yearly; for three, the cost to each will be $70, and where there are four, or more, the rate will be $60. By this means he expects to increase the residence patrons from 3,000 to 6,000, to the business section hundreds of new subscribers are also expected to come in on the "party circuits."

C. W. O'Neil, recently of the Central hotel at Lipsic, Ohio, is taken a position as chief cook at the Star restaurant.

Potato Scones.

Six potatoes, ½ pint Graham flour, ½ teaspoon'ful salt, ½ teaspoonful Royal Baking Powder, 1 tablespoonful butter, 1 cupful cream, 1 egg, ½ teaspoonful Royal Extract Clove. Boil 6 moderately large potatoes, peeled, until very well done, drain off water, set them by fire with cover off to dry; mash exceedingly smooth, adding butter, egg and cream. Sift together Graham, salt and powder, which add to potato preparation; when quite cold, add extract; mix into firm dough, which will require care in handling, as it is very short. Flour board with Graham, turn out dough, roll it to thickness of ½ inch, cut with sharp knife into oblong pieces—any length of soda crackers and as wide. Bake on hot griddle, prick ing them with fork to prevent blistering. Very light and delicate—to be eaten with butter.

Wheat or Flannel Cakes.

One and one-half pints flour, 1 tablespoonful brown sugar, 1 teaspoonful salt, 2 heaping teaspoonfuls Royal Baking Powder, 2 eggs, 1½ pints milk. Sift together flour, sugar, salt and powder; add beaten eggs and milk, mix into smoothe batter, that will run in rather continuous stream from pitcher. Bake on good hot griddle, rich brown color, in cakes large as tea saucers. (It is not in good taste to have griddle cakes larger.) Serve with maple syrup.

Bread Griddle Cakes.

One-half pound bread, 1 pint flour, 1 teaspoonful brown sugar, 1 teaspoonful salt, 14 teaspoonfuls Royal Baking Powder, 1 pint milk, 1 egg. Put bread, free from crusts to steep in warm water. When thoroughly soaked, wring dry in a towel, dilute with beaten egg and milk. Sift together flour, sugar, salt and powder, add to prepared bread, mix together into a smooth batter. Bake on well heated griddle. Serve with sugar and cream.

Orange Fritters.

Four oranges, common butter. Peel oranges, taking out all the white pith without breaking into pulp, dividing each in 4 or 5 pieces through natural divisions of the orange, dip each piece into batter and fry deep yellow, in plenty of lard made hot for the purpose, serve on napkin with powdered sugar.

THE Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest baking powder made. It has received the highest award at the U. S. Gov't official investigation, and at all the Great International Expositions and World's Fairs wherever exhibited in competition with others.

It makes the finest, lightest, sweetest, most wholesome bread, cake and pastry. More economical than any other leavening agent.

FIGHT WITH CONVICTS.

Thrilling Experience of a Posse With Desperadoes.

Found the Men Fortified in the Outskirts of Roswell, Where They Made a Stubborn Resistance.

Albuquerque, N. M., April 13.—A paper of this city publishes meagre details of a jail delivery at Roswell, in which half a dozen or more prisoners, awaiting their removal to the penitentiary, overpowered the jailor, locked him in a cell, then armed themselves with weapons and made their escape. A short time afterward an alarm was given and a score of men, all armed, started in pursuit of the prisoners, coming upon them in the outskirts of Roswell, where they had fortified themselves. A regular battle took place and the prisoners finally surrendered after one of their number had been seriously shot through the shoulder and another had received a bullet through his left hand. Three of the prisoners were desperate murderers. Sheriff Ferry has all the men in irons and under strong guard and will move them at once to the penitentiary.

COUNTERFEIT CAUGHT.

A Recent Move Has Been Operating in Virginia.

Harrisonburg, W. Va., April 13.—For a long while people in the Elkhorn coal regions have been annoyed with large quantities of counterfeit money which is in circulation in that section. Last evening Deputy United States Marshal Lindsey Vinson arrested French Wagner on suspicion. Wagner made a full confession soon after his arrest and gave the name of Sherman Westley as an accomplice, who was also arrested. Quite an amount of counterfeit coin was found on their persons and they told where they had a large quantity stored away. They successfully operated in that section two years. They are now in jail here.

CONTINUES UPWARD.

Oil Advances to $1.05 at Pittsburg Today.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 13.—Oil continued on its upward course this morning and seems to be fulfilling the predictions of those who said that it would go to $2 before the week was out. At the opening the Standard put its price up 25 cents, to $1.76. May options opened at $1.75 bid and the first sales were at $1.95, an advance of 26 cents over the closing quotation on Thursday. From $1.85 it broke to $1.82 and at 10.30 o'clock $1.92½ was bid. In the first five minutes of trading 19,000 barrels of May option were sold and there was some trading in cash oil at $1.91. Although there is great interest in the upward trend of oil here, there is little excitement, for the reason that nobody has the certificates on which to trade. The new Producers' association, as a competitor of the Standard in refining interests, is having a rather hard row to hoe at present. They are obliged to buy crude oil at high prices and sell the refined product at low prices. A meeting of said Standard producers was held here yesterday and discussed the matter but the result is not known. The solution of the present movement may develop in the future course of the refined market.

A Sure Cure.

Two married ladies were talking about their respective and respected lords.

"Does your husband forget things?" asked one.

"Never," said the other.

"Well, mine does. I think there is hardly a day when he comes home from his office that he doesn't begin to apologize for his forgetfulness. Of course I have to accept the apology on his promise to do better, and this next day the very same thing occurs."

"That must be extremely annoying."

"It is. Sometimes I get so vexed with him that I really have to scold him."

"And that never is pleasant."

"I should say not. I'm sure I'd rather be anything else than a scold, but some husbands actually drive their wives to it. I've been married ten years, and sometimes I almost fear if he doesn't improve he will have my temper utterly spoiled."

"I've been married a dozen years, and I never have any such trouble."

"Maybe your husband is an exception?"

"No, he's only average as married men go."

"Wasn't he ever forgetful?"

"He was at first, but I cured him of it."

"Gracious, I thought it was incurable!"

"Oh, no. You can cure him easily if you will use my remedy."

"I'm sure I'll only be too glad to. What is it?"

"Never ask him to get anything for you. Get it yourself. He has enough to think about without being errand boy."

"Oh!" exclaimed the first woman and remained silent for as much as two minutes.—Detroit Free Press.

Business Man—Can you write short-hand?

Applicant—Yes, sir.

"How many words a minute?"

"I never counted 'em, but the other day when my wife found in my overcoat pocket a letter which she gave me to mail last fall I took down every word she uttered as fast as she said them."
